Budget passed with one amendment

by Arlene Surprenant

After lengthy discussions on two or three items, town meeting voters on Saturday finally gave their approval to Wilmington's $30.8 million FY'94 budget and money articles totaling $513,888.

The line item that drew the most heated debate during the budget discussion was the salary figure of $75,000 for Town Manager Michael Caira. Selectman Michael McCoy, as promised during his campaign, led the attempt to roll back Caira's salary to $65,000, triggering an outpouring of support for Caira and the way he has handled his job thus far (see related article). In the end, Caira succeeded in holding onto his controversial raise.

Only one amendment was made to the proposed budget. That was a $330 addition to the library expenses line item to pay for the public library's membership in the American Library Association. The amendment was made by Anne Linehan.

Marcia Road resident Michael Buczynski asked for Police Chief Bobby Stewart's strategy on dealing with local drug problems during a question on the DARE line item of the police budget. Chief Stewart said he would continue to increase educational efforts to keep youngsters from using drugs. He added he was particularily concerned with an increase in LSD. Buczynski made an eloquent plea to eliminate the desire for drugs among teenagers like his daughter, and to "help young people seek and find their way."

"We have alot of angry children in this community. Somehow we have to reach out to the children," he said.

The $12.9 million school budget for Wilmington Schools passed easily with no discussion. School Committeeman Paul Palizzolo noted the figure was contingent on the receipt of $404,000 in state aid. In the event the money from the school reform package is not forthcoming or is less than expected, said Palizzolo, the town would deal with a shortfall at a special town meeting.

Charles Lyons, superintendent/director of the Shawsheen Tech, made a fervent pitch to increase Wilmington's assessment to the vocational school from $1,182,253 to his school committee's figure of $1,285,681. He noted the figure was based on increased enrollment of Wilmington students. Lyons said as state aid went down, assessments went up. The budget, he added, only increased by four percent this year despite the fact that it reportedly costs twice as much to run a vocational school.

"Nothing personal" Selectman Michael McCoy said his attempt to cut Town Manager Michael Caira's pay was "nothing personal." But he wanted it on a secret ballot.

"Don't you ever" Caira took exception to the request for a secret ballot. Pointing at McCoy, he said, "Don't you ever, ever, ever accuse me of intimidation!. . . This is an offensive insult and I will not take it."

Voters reject pay cut for manager

by Larz F. Neilson

An attempt to take back a $10,000 pay raise for Town Manager Michael Caira fizzled at the Wilmington Annual Town meeting on Saturday.

Selectman Michael McCoy only a week before had ridden the issue to victory in a comeback campaign that returned him to the board after a three-year absence. He had targeted incumbent Mark Haldane on the pay raise issue, defeating the man who had knocked him out of office in 1990.

The voters who elected McCoy were not at town meeting, though, and his effort to cut out the raise failed. Not only that, but it provided a forum for people to praise Caira for his management of the town.

The raise was granted to Caira last September on vote by selectmen. Caira had been hired as temporary town manager in June 1990, and became permanent a year later. He was hired at $65,000 and had remained at that level until his contract was settled. The contract was written to give him a $10,000 a year increase, retroactive to June 1991. Selectmen modified it to start the retroactivity as of June 1992.

The pay raise issue came up in the first few minutes of the meeting and ran for over two hours. McCoy made two motions, one to cut the pay, and the second to have the vote on a secret ballot.

Saying that it was "nothing personal" against the manager, he asked the voters, "When was the last time you received a $10,000 pay raise?"

Haldane took the floor to defend the raise, noting that the raise was a matter of contract.

"What we do is honor contractual obligations made by previous boards," he said. "This would be a direct violation of the contract. It sends a bad message and sets a dangerous precedent."

Rep. Jim Miceli challenged Haldane's assertion. "We have only one appropriating authority — the town meeting."

Jay Tighe pointed to the feud which has long divided the town into two political camps, centered around Miceli and Caira.

"The hate is unbelievable between the two camps," he said.

He called the motion an attempt to "get Mike Caira."

"If you don't want him, the selectmen should have the guts to fire him," Tighe said.

Assistant Town Manager Jeff Hull, who had also been an applicant for the manager's post, praised Caira. He pointed out that Caira had saved the town about a million dollars on the Avco case, and preserved the town's bond rating.

"Would you consider it fair to be singled out for a reduction where there is no allegation. of wrongdoing?" Hull asked.

Francis Connors said that where he worked, there was a bargaining agent. It would be a sad situation if the bargaining agent said to the employees, "that agreement doesn't hold. He asked for an opinion from town counsel on the legality of the cut.

Town Counsel Alan Atman had anticipated the question and had reviewed the appropriate laws and cases. The bottom line, he said, was that the manager would have a fair baisi of recovery.

Former selectman George Boylen said that Wavie Drew and others years ago had decided that the selectmen weren't the ones who should run the town.

The selectmen made a mistake, he said, when they hired Caira at a rate lower than that which was being paid to several empioyees under him. In giving him a $10,000 raise, they had simply corrected that mistake.

He said that in view of what the town counsel had said, McCoy should have the courtesy to withdraw his motion.

Susan Liberty said she felt personally that she was excluded from the decision on the raise.

Gerry Tully said his calendar must have been messed up. "I thought Good Friday was two weeks ago," he said. He wanted to know why people were out to crucify the manager.

"If we lose this manager, we'll put the town back into fiscal chaos," said Tully.

After a motion to end debate carried, McCoy took the floor to sum up. He said he had offered the motion because people had asked him to during his campaign.

Caira then took the floor to defend himself on a point of personal privilege.

Should every town employee be brought back to the level of June 1990, he asked. "I don't believe it should happen because it's not right." He said that if the town were to revert every salary line item back to the level of June 1990, they could save $1.2 million. But it would not be right.

He pointed out the former town manager Buzz Stapczynski had struck a deal with the selectmen where his salary was pegged to the level of increases awarded to town employees. He could have worked a similar deal, he said, but he did not because it was wrong.

Caira then turned to McCoy and spoke of the motion for a secret ballot. "Don't you ever, ever, ever try to accuse me of intimidation. I resent in the very deepest sense of the word, any indication that I would ever intimidate anyone," he said. "That is an offensive insult and I will not take it."

He urged the voters not to stoop to personalities. "Let's make informed decisions, he said. "Don't hide behind a specious argument."

Of himself, he said, "What you see is what you get, and I don't know any other way to play the game."

The first vote taken was a voice vote on whether to use a secret ballot. It was solidly against the secret ballot.

Miceli questioned the moderator's call, and was joined by six others. This brought the meeting to a standing vote on whether to have a secret ballot. The vote was 46 in favor, 201 opposed.

The motion to reduce the town manager's salary was defeated on a voice vote.

Voters sanction new sewer formula

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington could have a new way to fund sewer projects in the future thanks to an affirmative vote at Saturday's annual town meeting. In addition, all petitioners seeking to rezone their property were given the green light during the day long meeting. An article which would have required substantiated evidence before attempting the recall of a public official was withdrawn by the petitioner so the bylaw committee could add more definitive language.

Saturday's meeting proceeded without a break for nearly nine hours as residents raised questions and argued pro and con on the 45 article warrant. Of those articles, 30 were approved, two were defeated, and 12 were either withdrawn or passed over.

Sewer article

One of the more hotly debated articles was Article 14, which authorizes the town to petition the General Court to amend the betterment act for sewer projects. The article was presented by Arthur Spear, a member of the Sewer Financial Advisory Committee formed to come up with a more equitable way to fund future sewer construction. Currently, the town picks up about 50 percent of construction costs and those whose property is bettered by the sewer picks up the rest. This was felt to be unfair with MWRA rates escalating and no government grants available to help defray the cost.

Spear told voters the proposed method leaves the split between taxpayers and abuttors up to town meeting and "gives us a chance to take every project on its own merit." In the end he summed up: "you've got to look a little bit forward."

Discussion soon shifted to one line that was added to the article after the joint public hearing on the warrant. Iva Rideout warned residents to be careful of the line, which would allow the selectmen and the town manager to make amendments to section six of the law. She questioned the impact of the additional line down the road. Rideout was told this was the same language added to similar articles and would give lawmakers the ability to craft specific language to meet the intent of the article.

Christine Emery argued that the article was unfair to taxpayers not yet on sewer.

"That seems to be taxation without representation," she said.

Tony Capuano said Wilmington can't afford sewers at this time and urged residents "to vote this thing down completely."

Town Manager Michael Caira pointed out if the voters did not pass the article, current sewer users would continue to be the only residents paying high MWRA rates. In the end, the article passed 144 to 87.

Rezoning articles

Several abuttors of John Forrest's parcel off Lowell Street stood up to urge voters to go along with the proposed rezoning of the parcel from R20 to High Density Business to allow the petitioner to move two businesses toward Lowell Street and away from their homes in the rear of the site. One abuttor told residents, "by voting against this article you're really penalizing the abuttors." He added, instead of a business 20 feet from his yard, it would be 200 feet away. The planning board gave its stamp of approval saying this plan was better than the previous proposal.

The most outspoken against Article 45 was selectman Michael McCoy who claimed Forrest didn't follow through on his original plan to only relocate his gas station on the site. Instead, he said, he brought in a plan showing a two lot commercial subdivision.

"And that's how he thanked the people of Wilmington," McCoy said.

"I have never, ever, ever lied to you people," vowed Forrest, adding he had been sitting on this site and paying taxes on it for several years and it was now time to move forward. Voters agreed and passed the article 171 to 10.

A second rezoning article, Article 41, sought to rezone 27.4 acres of land behind the Roberts Estate off Burlington Avenue from R60 to R20. Originally, the petitioner wanted to rezone 54 acres. Attorney Bob Peterson, speaking for owner and developer Mark Lopez, said the rezoning would allow Lopez to cluster 28 homes on less land so there would be no impact to wetlands. In addition, he said, some of the land would be given to the town and both entrances would be off Burlington Avenue.

Abuttors seemed divided on the proposal. Al Cuoco formerly fought against any development of the parcel and was one of those who had the land rezoned to R60 to prevent a PRD project and condo proposal from being built on site. He told voters, "it's different now" and spoke out in favor of the plan.

Local realtor Anne Mahoney and neighbor Al Michaels were adamantly opposed to the rezoning.

"I feel strongly R60 means a more careful development," said Michaels. He added, without a binding agreement with the town, there was no guarantee the subdivision would be built as stated.

Mahoney felt the project would increase traffic on an already busy street and the area would lose animals and old cedar trees which would reportedly be removed for the road.

Health Director Greg Erickson told voters the proposal was environmentally sound and explained, in his dealings with the developer, Lopez always followed through on what he promised.

Voters gave a 154 to 24 vote of confidence to the builder.

Other articles

Other articles under discussion included:

• Article 40 — Voters favored a request by David Galante to rezone 1.2 acres on Main Street for the sale of used cars. Planning board members pointed out such a use was not allowed in a High Density Business zone. Supporters said Galante (of Galante's Welding) had been a good neighbor who is bringing more business to town.

• Article 17 — Chris Emery asked that voters only give $750 to the Marine Corps League for their headquarters on Chestnut Street on the condition no alcohol be consumed on the premises. She said neighbors had a safety concern. Many spoke against the condition and disputed there had been any "irresponsible" drinking in the leased building or in the vicinity. Jim Murray called the league "a fine organization" and pointed out they had taken good care of the old South School building.

•Article 42 — This was one of two articles which went down in defeat. The petitioner sought a by-law change,which would allow up to 20 seats in a sandwich shop,in order to compete with nearby businesses. While some spoke out in favor of the change saying "this is still America, the land of opportunity," others said the petitioner last year accepted the constraints imposed on him under the bylaw.

•Article 35 — This was the second article that went down in defeat.Through it, Police Lt. LaRivee sought to correct the civil service law regarding the reduction in rank of a police officer. He said the current system is unfair and was backed by Deputy Bernard Nally. The town manager and police chief felt the issue should be pursued at the collective bargaining table and urged voters to disapprove the article until it is properly negotiated.

Town to get tough on underground tanks

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington Fire Department and the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commission are urging homeowners with underground storage tanks which fall under the town's bylaw to have them checked or removed from the ground.

According to Water and Sewer Commissioner Jonathan Goldfield, homeowners with 1,000 gallon underground tanks have had five years to comply with the town's tank bylaw. He added now that the town is coming into the fifth year of the bylaw, both his committee and the fire department will start getting more pro-active on the issue.

At a board meeting last month, said Goldfield, the commission discussed the bylaw with Fire Chief Dan Stewart and both parties agreed to put together a list of competent vendors who could remove tanks for residents.

Chief Stewart told this paper the law not only applies to 1,000 gallon underground tanks but also to tanks within 1,000 feet of a wellfield or the town's water supply. He said almost all gas stations and industries have complied with the law and the town, in that respect, "is in excellent shape." Anyone having a 20-year-old tank falling under the bylaw should begin the removal process. If a homeowner wishes to replace an old tank with another underground tank, said Stewart, the new tank has to be a double walled fiberglass tank with a monitoring system. However, said the fire chief, nine of 11 banks in the area are now requiring homeowners to remove underground tanks before they issue a mortgage.

"The marketplace is going to drive the removal of tanks," said Chief Stewart.

The fire department is currently working on a video to be aired on the local cable station to demonstrate the removal of storage tanks. Footage shows actual tanks being taken out of the ground in Wilmington. The show will also feature an informal discussion of the bylaw and how it affects local residents.

"Our goal is to make it as easy as possible for the homeowner to comply with the bylaw. We're here to help residents through the process," said Stewart. He warned, as time goes on, regulations are going to be more stringent so it's to everyone's advantage to begin the process soon.

Any resident having a question on the bylaw or needing assistance should call Chief Dan Stewart at 658-3346.

BAILING OUT AFTER A FLOOD

Floods, hurricanes and other disasters are more than acts of God that disrupt lives and uproot homes. They also have tax consequences.

If an area's commerce has been totally disrupted - as in Florida and Hawaii last fall - the Internal Revenue Service and the state tax department may extend filing deadlines.

In addition, individuals may deduct casualty losses that exceed 10 percent of adjusted gross income, less $100 per occurrence. If the community has been declared a disaster area, the taxpayer gets an extra tax option: to declare the loss either in the year in which it happens or the previous year, which ever is more beneficial.

Taking the loss for the previous year may require filing an amended return for that year if the return has already been filed, but speeds up a tax refund for the loss. Taking the loss for the current year, when the casualty actually happened, means waiting until the following April for any tax advantages, but if the casualty has affected earnings, may be a better bet.

Paralyzed by hate

by Arlene Surprenant

The political season may be over but the animosity lingers on. The continued division between the two political camps in town was never more apparent than at Saturday's town meeting when voters were caught up in a two hour battle to roll back the town manager's salary. One resident said the last thing he expected was "a political crucifixion." Long time observors, however, were not surprised. But it was a disgusted Jay Tighe who put his finger right on the problem when he cried out from the back of the room: "the issue is the hate is unbelievable between the camps in town."

Hate. Though only a four letter word, it's one of the two most powerful emotions known to man. In Wilmington, hate has been the by-product of the long standing feud between the Miceli-McCoy and the Cain-Caira-DePasquale factions. The bitterness dates back many years to when Jim Miceli was running for the representative's seat then held by the late Fred F. Cain.

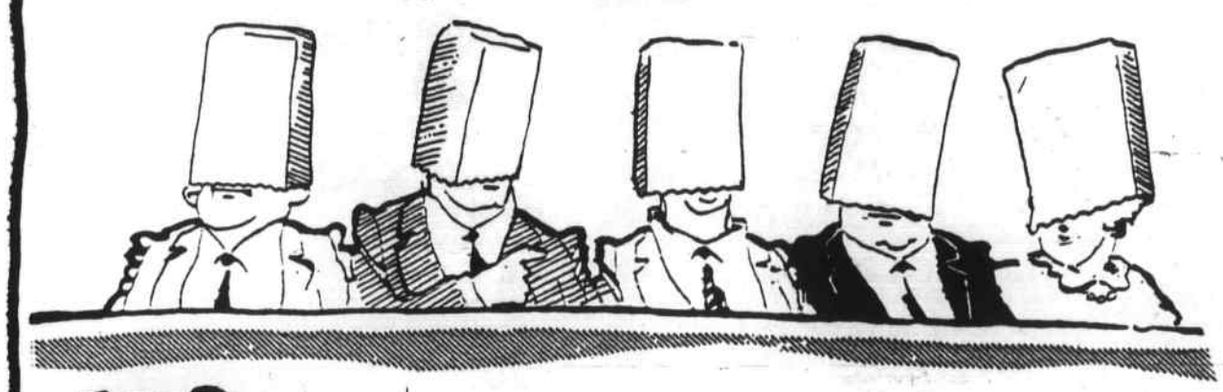

Over the years neither side has let down its guard. The hatred continues to grow and draws in many local residents who find themselves aligned with one camp or the other. Some people have observed, accurately, that truly independent candidates are few and far between in Wilmington. Every issue and many town boards seem to have been tainted by the feud: from the successful attempt to keep Aldo Caira from the superintendency of Tewksbury Hospital, from the roadblocks thrown in front of the Town Center project, and the physical altercation between Selectmen Mike McCoy and Bob Cain, to the in-fighting on the housing authority and the school committee, the refusal to reappoint Bruce MacDonald to the board of appeals, and the recent recall attempt of two school committeemen known to be Miceli supporters.

Sadly, Wilmington is paralyzed by the hate in both camps. There's nothing worse than watching both sides jockey for a position of power on the board of selectmen, for example, and listening to citizens speculate about the length of time it will take to oust Michael Caira from office. Like a boil, the hate continues to fester. The poisons lie close to the surface just waiting to explode.

Wilmington and its people deserve better. The bitterness and backstabbing must stop before we all lose sight of what's important and future generations carry on the feud. Each side has alot to offer this town. It's up to both sides to bury their differences and move forward to accomplish something of which we all can be proud — like the beautification of Main Street, a teen center for our youth, a brand new police and fire station, jobs for our unemployed, and boards whose members work together for a change.

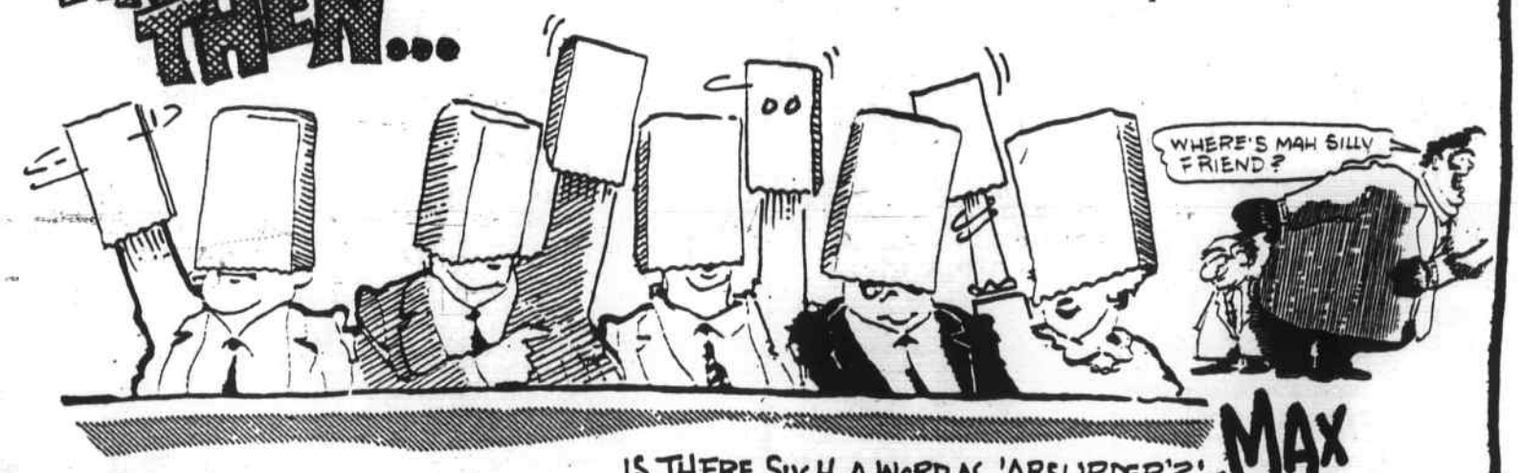

Town Crier Newsnote:

Just-returned Selectman McCoy attends town meeting and immediately moves to cut town manager's salary by $10,000 . . . and further moves that such a vote be taken by secret ballot to shield identities of those voting. The motion for a secret ballot is overwhelmingly defeated on voice vote.

AND THEN...

Representative James R. Miceli challenges the results of the voice vote, bringing about a standing — or not-so-secret— vote on the secret ballot question.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the voters of Wilmington for their support in electing me to the Wilmington School Committee. I especially would like to thank my wife Elaine and my children Stacy and Richard who gave me their love and support.

I would also like to thank the many friends and relatives who supported me by holding signs, sending out friendship cards and giving me encouragement.

I am looking forward to serving on the Wilmington School Committee and serving the people of Wilmington.

Sincerely,
Paul R. Palizzolo

Why is the grass greener?

by George R. Allan

Several years ago, Erma Bombeck wrote a book entitled The Grass is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank. Technically, it is the leaching field, not the septic tank, that has the green grass, but the point is well taken. The grass is greener because of the continuous supply of nutrient rich wastewater which is feeding the root system. By the end of August, the leaching field area is usually the only patch of green grass in my yard.

Some communities across the country have taken this common treatment technique a step further and are using aquatic plants to treat sewage. Referred to as artificial marshland wastewater treatment systems, they use plants such as bulrushes, duckweed and even canna lillies to "farm" sewage. These marshlands rely on natural processes to purify the waste. Conventional municipal sewage treatment plants also depend on biological means but are augmented by mechanical aeration and chemical addition. These techniques speed up the natural processes.

A typical marshland system includes a sewage lagoon for initial settling. The waste then flows into the artificial marshland where the organics in the sewage are absorbed by the plants' roots and stems.

Periodically, the plants have to be cut or harvested. Because of their high protein value, they are dried and then fed to livestock. This could be the ultimate in recycling!

This treatment concept was developed by NASA engineers as an efficient way to treat sewage and recycle it in future space stations. The Biosphere 2 experiment in the desert of Arizona is also relying on natural treatment of sewage.

Artificial marshlands have shown some advantage over conventional sewage treatment plants. Because there are few mechanical pieces of equipment, energy costs are less and replacement costs are minimized. Little technical training is required because of the simplicity. Wildlife are also attracted to the marshlands. There have been no reports of odors from any of the operating marshlands.

On the negative side, the technology is still evolving and all the bugs have not been worked out. In addition, this treatment system requires a large area. For example, a community of 2,000 people in Mississippi needed 14 acres for its artificial marshland. One of the other problems is industrial wastes, which could "poison" the system. Such wastes could contain lead or mercury and be very acidic.

Since most of the installations have been in warmer climates, there is concern whether these natural treatment systems will operate efficiently in the North, some experts contend that since most of the actual treatment is done by microbes living in the roots, snow and sub freezing temperatures will not be a deterrent to their use in colder climates.

Don't expect the MWRA to look at this technique. For one thing, they would need to turn the state of Rhode Island into an artificial marshland to handle the billions of gallons of sewage that are produced in this district. This treatment alternative could, however, be a cost efficient solution for small towns, schools, or office buildings in the future. The "green revolution" that many consumers are participating in with the products they buy, could spill over into sewage treatment.

frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

Wilmington Town Manager Mike Caira won the first post-election skirmish at Saturday's town meeting when the manager had the votes and Rep. Miceli and Selectman McCoy did not.Unfortunately for Caira, it may have been just one bruising battle of many to come and it was fought on a Caira-friendly turf where Miceli and his forces have traditionally been weak and outgunned.

The representative and his political machine recently proved they can out-vote Caira and his allies at the ballot box. But getting the troops out for a brief stop at the Saturday election is apparently easier for Miceli and McCoy than recruiting bodies for town meeting, an all-day affair that can be aching when the weather outside is pristine.

Caira's position has nonetheless changed since the election. He faces the greatest threat to his administration since he took the reins of office from former manager Reginald Stapczynski on June 4, 1990. His ability to withstand a board where at least two members are reportedly seeking his ouster will depend on his reinforcing an impression that the manager's office is held by a competent professional who should be judged in a non-political fashion.

Judgement day for presidents unfairly comes at the 100-day mark. For the town manager it's coming about three years into his term with supporters and critics lined up to speak. First, it's necessary to appreciate the background of the man who is arguably the most important and powerful official in Wilmington's municipal government.

Mike Caira brought two principal strengths as an applicant for the town manager's post. First, he was a highly recognized and popular figure in the community, whose jocular style and famous wit made him a favorite feature at town meeting where he held the gavel as moderator. It was always Mike Caira who knew how to break the tension, just at the right moment, with a memorable one-liner which would usually bring the house down and, more importantly, get the debate moving.

Before serving as moderator, Caira was a member of the board of selectmen as was his father. His family established itself as one of the more powerful political clans in a community where large families have historically developed into cagey political organizations.

Add to his local political and family ties a stunning resume. This was Caira's second strength. He holds a Master's Degree in public administration and, beginning in 1971, served in a series of high profile government posts including a position on the executive staff of Governor Frank Sargent. From 1985 to 1988, Caira was the national executive director for the Sons of Italy of America. He left the post in the summer of 1988 to manage Joe Malone's defiant bid against Senator Ted Kennedy. It was the ultimate David taking on Goliath maneuver and, in the long term, the careers of both Malone and Caira would be greatly enhanced.

Today, Joe Malone is the state treasurer and receiver general and Mike Caira the head of a municipal government where there is an abundance of typical policy headaches.

Caira and his supporters point to a list of accomplishments which they contend have improved the lot of local residents and proven the prowers of a manager who wants to avoid a political judgement and prefers, instead, a substantive one.

"By personally negotiating collective bargaining agreements rather than hire consultants he saved the community more than his annual salary," said former selectman and chairman of the board Mark Haldane, who's support of Caira's pay raise in 1992 became a principal campaign issue this year.

Haldane said the manager has exhibited an acute level of competence on a number of issues, including the negotiation in New York with Moody's Investment to maintain the town's bond rating and concluding a tax abatement settlement with Textron last year. "That Textron agreement saved us nearly a million," said Haldane.

Caira's professional competence is the hallmark of his administration and is ironically cited by even those who may have been associated with the manager's opposition. "I've told him personally that he can stay there for the next 25 years for all I care," said Selectman Gerry Duggan. The selectman from Butters Row was staunch in his support of the manager at annual town meeting when Selectman McCoy and Representative Miceli made a failed attempt to cut Caira's salary. "It's a contract and I don't think it should be negotiated at town meeting," said Duggan, explaining that "there's a faction of the board that may be seeking his ouster" but that he, Duggan, is not a part of it.

Like Haldane, Duggan recognized Caira's negotiating skills and applauded the manager's work on contracts. However, Duggan does have a beef and it boils down to the manager's style of politics. "I don't think he's ever read the book on employer/employee relations," said Duggan. "I don't agree with his heavy handed relationship with town employees. There seems to be a lack of compassion on his part and I think this is a Republican trait that he's following. I don't think Republicans can relate to the working class." Duggan is a registered Democrat.

The partisan jibe aside, Duggan said that Caira is political because "he almost has to be" and that if his performance remains good overall, the manager should be secure in his post.

Security may have been missing for Caira during the campaign. His salary raise was ridiculed in banner size lettering and became a focal point in Mike McCoy's campaign against incumbent Mark Haldane. McCoy rode the issue to a stunning near-first place finish and left Caira and his allies visibly shaken.

But Saturday's events have bolstered the Caira crowd and proved something publicly. When all the facts are explained carefully, which can happen at a town meeting forum and rarely does in the rapid pace of a campaign, the manager still enjoys at least some level of grass roots support. "What they were saying on Saturday is that the manager is doing a good job and that personalities should not be involved," said Selectman Bob Cain. " Even those opposed to the manager on a personal basis couldn't find a single issue that they could address as being a problem."

For his part, Caira believes his mandate is unchanged. "I'm faced with the same challenges, which is to provide the best possible government for Wilmington, and I'm looking forward to working with everyone," said Caira with diplomatic perfection.

However, on the issue of Saturday's pay raise vote the street smart, political Mike Caira came to the surface. "It proved that town residents can properly distinguished between performance and politics. The people of Wilmington want to protect the integrity of our professionally managed local government and they categorically reject any attempt to allow politics to interfere with good government."

Weir plan on hold

by Arlene Surprenant

A proposal to construct a weir on three parcels on Eames Street and Jewell Drive by the Olin Chemical plant was put on hold Wednesday to allow members of the Conservation Commission to receive further information. The issue will come up again at the board's next meeting May 5.

Steve Morrow and John Michaels of Olin came before the commission last week to explain the plan for the weir. This was one of many visits Olin officials have made to the board as the company works with the town in containing contaminants flowing in the groundwater from the site.

Michaels said he hopes the weir or ditch will create a natural barrier and reverse the flow of contaminated groundwater into the ditch and force it back onto Olin's property. He added hay bales by the ditch will help keep contaminants on site. Morrow told officials they could adjust the weir and would be monitoring it once a week.

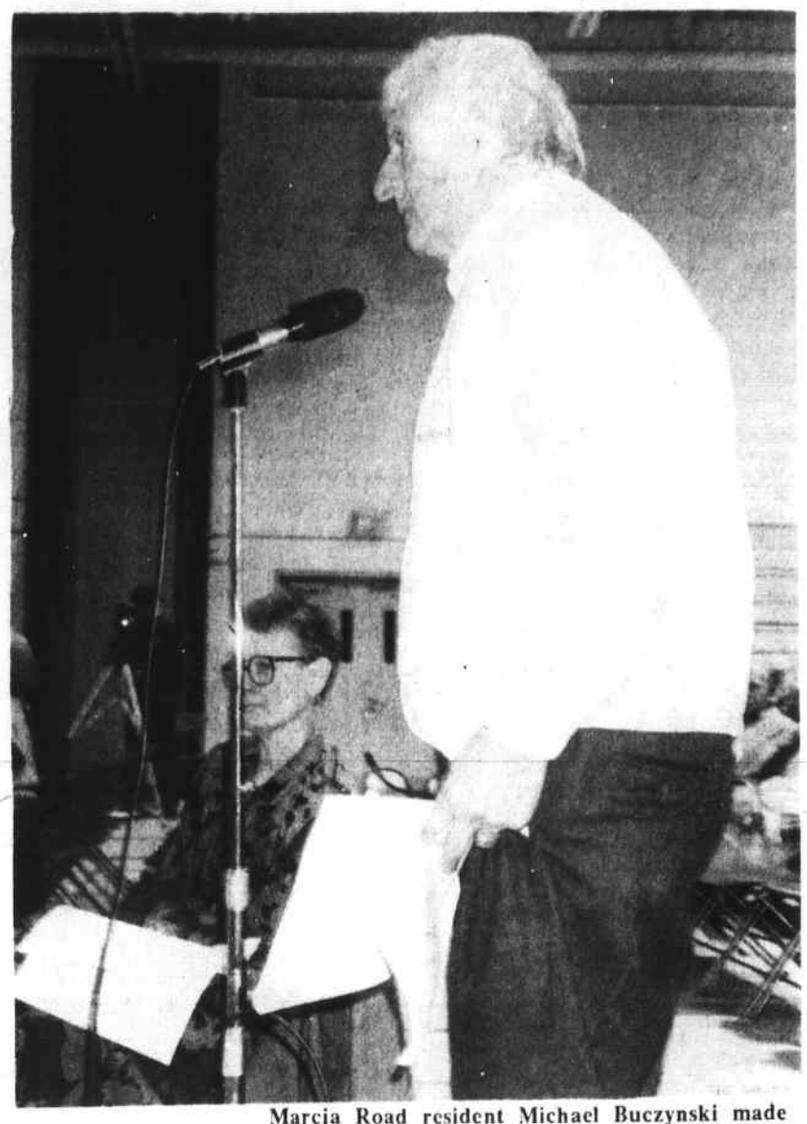

Environmental Specialist Ann Gagnon asked for documentation proving the water will flow around the ditch and back onto Olin property.

"We think that will happen," said Michaels.The information, he added, was based on his work with a computer model.

Michaels explained the contamination is coming from a shallow groundwater system close to the ditch. This pit area had been used by previous companies for disposal, he said.

Gagnon suggested a continuance to May 5. She suggested the men turn in their report to the board by then, they work out a maintenance monitoring plan, they inform the other two property owners (Carpet World and Hardwick Chemicals) about the weir, and they consider the possibility of high flooding in that area in the spring in case there is an impact to their plan.

Commissioner Bill MacKinnon said he was "alot more comfortable with this whole scenario than I was last fall."

Eloquent Marcia Road resident Michael Buczynski made an eloquent plea at the Wilmington Town Meeting. He urged the town to reach out to children and keep them off drugs. (Photo by Arlene Surprenant)

Karaoke at Stelios

by Arlene Surprenant

Stelios, a popular Wilmington restaurant on Lowell Street, will soon be offering karaoke music two nights a week.

At their last meeting, members of the board of selectmen voted four to one to grant owners an entertainment license for one year. Selectman Michael McCoy abstained from the vote.The license is similar to one granted to Rocco's Restaurant and will allow karaoke music at the restaurant from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights. During those hours, food and alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages will be served. The owners were also granted a special permit from the board of appeals.

Attorney receives award

On April 16, U.S. Army Research, Development and Engineering Center held its Annual Award Ceremony. Richard J. Donahue, of Tewksbury and a patent attorney, in the office of the chief council, was awarded the Technical Director's Award in obtaining a cooperative research and development agreement with Vindicator, Incorporated. This transfers the U.S. Army Natick RD&E Center's technology for irradiation processing of a wide variety of foods to the civilian sector and facilitates additional research at Vindicator's facilities.

Through his efforts, a memorandum of understanding between Natick and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) was established to use irradiated beef steaks, processed by Vindicator, Inc., on a space shuttle mission. His outstanding achievements bring great credit upon himself, Natick and the Department of the Army.

Hearing continued on two lot subdivision

by Arlene Surprenant

Members of the Wilmington Conservation Commission last week opted to again continue a public meeting on a request to grade and fill within the buffer zone to allow for the construction of a two lot subdivision off Salem Street.

The subdivision is proposed for a site near I-93 and Woburn Street and is being built by owner Bob Scarano. Commissioners said they could not issue a decision yet because there were several outstanding isues to be resolved. One of these was a review of the septic system plan by the Board of Health. Though Scarano said he mailed a certified copy of the plan showing a temporary easement and the slope to the health director, Environmental Specialist Ann Gagnon said the director had not yet received it. Acting Chairman Lynne Guzinski added that town counsel would also have to review the easement.

Commissioner John White suggested a sand trap in the culvert nearby to stop soft silt sand from running from the roadway into the water pipe. Otherwise, he said, there could be an effect on the water supply later on. Scarano maintained he had kept the culvert "as clean as I could." Bill MacKinnon feared the impact of the project on the town's water supply.

"You're building on property that is marginal at best," he said, adding that someday the septic systems could fail.

Conrad Gerhartz, who lives nearby, also questioned the project, especially with a standing water problem in the area. He suggested the board ask for new perc rates since the map shown by Scarano was reportedly six years old.

Scarano argued that the health director did some tests three weeks ago and added a foot to the reading to protect the aquifer. He added an engineer had measured the depth of the pond.

"The plan meets all Title V (septic system) specifications," Scarano said.

Scarano assured one abuttor he would not be raising the septic system and he would be including a 9,000 square foot replication area for displaced water. Gagnon noted the ponding is on land subject to flooding.

In a letter to the commission, the health director noted the water level in the area is high and the owner would have to do "extensive water removal" before beginning to build.

The board continued the matter to their May 5 meeting.

Breastfeeding workshop

The decision to breastfeed or bottle feed is a topic of importance to new parents. Winchester Hospital offers a workshop, helpful to parents to be, which provides accurate information on this subject.

The workshop provides a variety of information such as the pros and cons of breastfeeding, self help measures to prevent complications, routines for bottle and breast feeding and helpful hints to mothers who work outside of the home.

Wilmington Vacuum Cleaners - conveniently located at Colonial Park Mall

"If I sell something, I fix it!" says Jim MacDonald, owner of Wilmington Vacuum Cleaners. What's that... you didn't buy your vacuum from him? Bring it in anyway. Jim works on all makes and models, with an average turnaround time of 2-4 days for parts or repairs.

Looking for a new machine? Wilmington Vacuum Cleaners sells Royal, Eureka, Oreck, Hoover, Panasonic, and Sanitaire models, as well as their parts and supplies. Prices range from $29 for a carpet sweeper, to about $500 for the top of their Royal line. Jim says that upright models are the most popular right now, but he also has several canister styles to choose from. The shop will take trade-ins on certain models, and also sells used machines.

Suffering from springtime allergies? Why not try one of the new models with electrostatically charged bags and filters. These models are designed to remove pollen, dust, and even dust mites from the vacuum exhaust. The Royal model claims to remove particles as small as one micron in size!

Wilmington Vacuum Cleaners is located at 35 Lowell St., in the Colonial Park Mall. They're open Monday thru Friday: 8:30 - 5:30; and Saturday: 8:30 - 4. Gift certificates are available and they offer free layaway.

BOOMERS

BILLIARDS 8 GAMES
780 Main St., (Rte. 38), Wilmington
(508) 658-5300

The room was as dark as a pit. The air, heavy with cigar smoke, hung like a cloud as rumpled bodies vied for position at the table... This might be an old movie, but it certainly isn't Boomers!

Welcome to the pool hall of the 90s! Big, bright, immaculate, lots of fresh air, and a CD juke box constantly playing all the latest music. Bring your friends, bring your date, bring your kids... THIS is Boomers.

Gary and Ruth Lucchesi have been operating in Wilmington for the last four years, but they're certainly not new to the business. Gary's family owned and operated the Ivory Pool Hall in Holyoke, Mass. "I was born in this business," he says. "My mother used to change my diapers on a pool table."

Boomers (named for the "Baby Boomers") is really just an offshoot of their primary business, Eastern Billiard Supply. Eastern has been in operation for over 30 years, and is a distributor of pool tables and equipment. They'll set up your pool room - start to finish, and also take pride in the expert repair work done in their shop. "If someone brings in a $1,000 cue stick, you don't want to mess up a $30 repair," says Gary.

Boomers opens every day at noon, and closes Sun. - Thurs. at 1am, and Fri. & Sat. at 2am. Tournaments are scheduled four nights a week at 8pm:

Monday - Class "D" 9-Ball, Race to 7
Tuesday - Class "C" 9-Ball, Race to 7
Wednesday - Class "E" 9-Ball
Thursday - Class "D" 9-Ball, Race to 7

Open table time is by the hour - $8 for two players, $12 for four. They don't take reservations, but do run a waiting list on busy nights. If you should have to wait, play some video games, visit the pro shop, or stop by the snack bar. They're even an on-line Mass. Lottery Agent. "We used to notice that our customers were leaving at 7:30 to go buy their lottery tickets," says Gary... not any more.

Homes to be funded for renovation

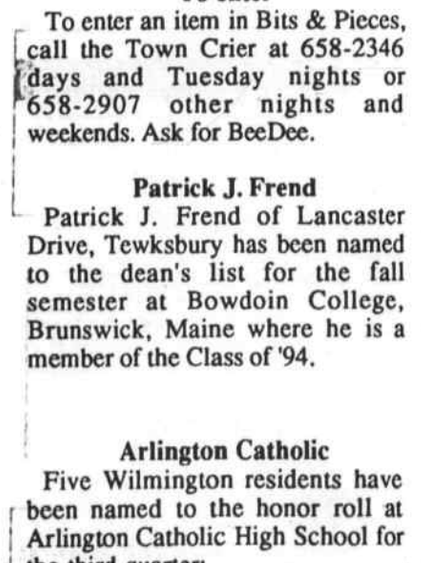

by Arlene Surprenant

Approximately 28 homes in the Silver Lake area will be funded for moderate and substantial rehabilitation with $326,750 from the town's Small Cities Grant.

The town received the $600,000 federal grant last August. Besides helping residents with low to moderate incomes to renovate or rehabilitate their homes, the grant will help pay for the creation of accessory apartments, for employment assistance and job training, and allow first time homebuyers to purchase a home.

Wilmington's Planning / Conservation Director Lynn Duncan is acting as the Environmental Certification Officer for the rehabilitation program. She is seeking comments from the public on those units scheduled for rehabilitation which appear to be situated in the 100 year flood plain by Silver Lake/ Lubbers Brook and within 100 feet of wetlands that fall under the Wetlands Protection Act. All written comments regarding the potential impact of the work on these sensitive areas must be received in Duncan's office at Wilmington Town Hall, 121 Glen Road no later than May 14.

Leaf pickup next two weeks

Leaves and grass will be picked up at curbside in Wilmington during the weeks of: Monday, May 3 through Friday, May 7; Monday, May 10 through May 14.

Leaves and grass will be picked up by Waste Management at no cost to the town. Residents must place their leaves and grass out at curbside on the date that their trash is collected. Leaves and grass may be placed together in the same bags. Bags must be placed to the right of the driveway facing the road and trash bags must be placed on the left side of the driveway facing the road.

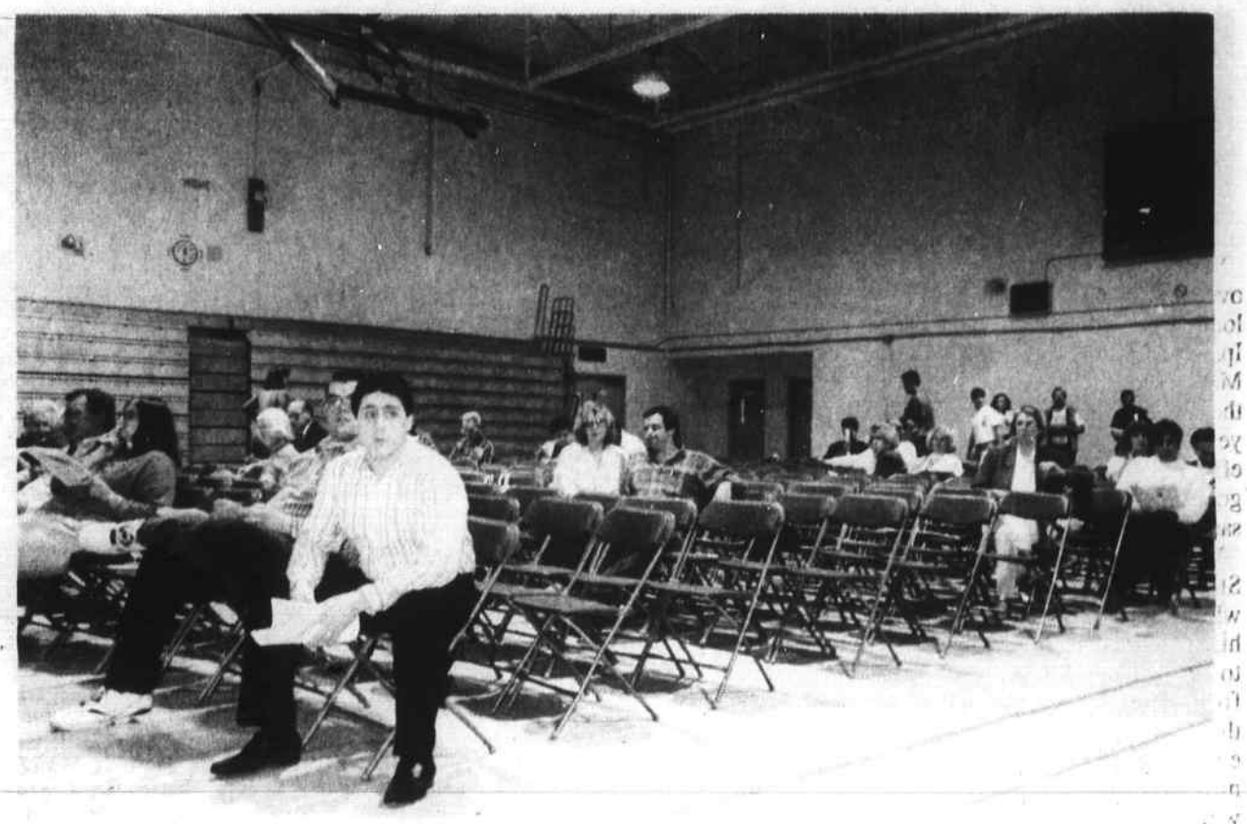

Leaves and grass will be composted at the town's recycling center located off Old Main Street. There is no limit on the amount of leaves and grass you can put out for collection, but it is important that only leaves and grass be included.

1) Please, no branches and/or brush.

2) Leaves and grass must be in tied bags. Plastic or biodegradable bags are acceptable.

The recycling center is open every Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. for any homeowner who wishes to transport their own leaves and grass.

For further information call Jeff Hull, assistant town manager (658-3311) or Robert Palmer, supt. of public works (658-4481).

Quorum

The Cushing gymnasium at Wilmington High School had emptied out considerably from earlier attendance when two residents called for quorum counts as Saturday's town meeting neared an end. In both cases, there were enough voters present to continue the meeting. The quorum is 150. Quorum counts are used as a parliamentary tactic for stopping a meeting. (Photo by Arlene Surprenant)

Middlesex Canal 200 years old

by Capt. Larz Neilson

Two hundred years ago saw the beginning of what became the Middlesex Canal in Eastern Massachusetts. It was the first transportation canal in the United States. In 1967 it was designated as the first National Historical Civil Engineering Landmark (NHCEL).

Wilmington occupies a large part of the remains of that canal, with four locks, and many miles of water. Prominent are the ruins of the aqueduct over the Shawsheen River, at the Wilmington/Billerica line.

A group of Boston businessmen sought to improve transportation from New Hampshire to Boston. Goods were being brought down the Merrimack River by boat to the approximate site of Lowell, and there transferred to wagons or other means of transportation to Boston.

James Sullivan, a prominent businessman of Boston, was one of those Boston businessmen. Sullivan was later the Governor of the Commonwealth. The year was 1793 when the canal company was chartered, with Sullivan as first president.

Loammi Baldwin of Woburn was chosen to be the superintendent of the project. He had seen much service during the Revolution. After the Revolution he constructed the first two drydocks in the United States, one of which is in the former Boston Navy Yard.

Working with Baldwin was a neighbor, Samuel Thompson. Both men had farms on Elm Street in what is now North Woburn.

An English surveyor, William Weston, who had been working in Pennsylvania, was hired to lay out the route of the canal. Weston laid out two routes, one of which became the Middlesex Canal, and the other was later used for the Boston and Lowell Railroad.

While working in Wilmington, on the farm of William Butters, Weston noticed a woodpecker at work on an apple tree.

That Butters apple, a fine variety, was called the Baldwin apple, and was also called the Thompson Apple. Both those men grafted scions onto trees on their own farms.

Today that Butters Apple is the Baldwin Apple.

The canal was designed to have a depth of 3.5 feet, and to be 20 feet wide at the bottom. The barges, horse drawn, were nine and a half feet wide and 75 feet long, and could meet and pass each other in the canal.

The locks, (steps, one could say) were 12 feet wide and 75 feet long. The highest point in the canal was in North Billerica, where the Concord River provided water which flowed in both directions. Water flowed from the Concord River north to Lowell, and south to Charlestown.

The Middlesex Canal was a major means of transportation until the Boston and Lowell Railroad was constructed. Shortly after that, a few years, it ceased being in business.

Construction was finished in 1803, and the first traffic was on December 31 of that year.

The Middlesex Canal Association, PO Box 333, Billerica MA 01821 is planning a series of meetings in the towns through which the canal went, one meeting of each year for the next 10 years.

In 1993 a play is to be presented, in Medford. The date at this time is uncertain. Betty Bigwood of Chestnut Street, Wilmington represents the Middlesex Canal Association.

Mrs. Bigwood is anxious to get assistance in "cleaning up" the canal, and in preparing it to be seen during the next 10 years. She plans to see if an exhibit can be established in the Wilmington Library.

The lady is hoping there can be some "community projects."

She was present, Monday evening for a discussion with members of the Wilmington Historical Commission. Members of the Commission advised her that quite possibly she can get assistance from the Wilmington Boy Scout Troops, maybe in September, after school has been started for the year.

"Boy Scouts" she was told, "are always anxious to do community projects."

Shank to speak at Canal Assoc.

The Middlesex Canal Association will hold its annual meeting Sunday, May 2 at 2 p.m. at the Wilmington Arts Center, 219 Middlesex Avenue (Rte. 62 , Wilmington).

The speaker will be Bill Shank, PE and his topic will be "Those Amazing Pennsylvania Canals." By the mid 1850s, Pennsylvanians and their cargos could ship between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh and Erie and Baltimore and Elmira, N.Y. as well as many other places, all by canal boat. Canals transported coal from the mines in Northeastern Pennsylvania to markets in New York, New Jersey, Maryland and Pennsylvania itself. Though the canals of New York State may be better known, Pennsylvania had many more miles of canals than any other state in the Union, and employed some ingenious means to overcome the mountains in the center of the state.

Bill Shank is the fifth generation of his family to have a direct link to the canals of Pennsylvania. He is the editor of American Canals, the quarterly newsletter of the American Canal Society. He is also past president of the American Canal Society and past vice president of the Pennsylvania Canal Society.

The talk will be preceded by a short business meeting of the MCA. The meeting and talk are open to the public and there is no charge. Take your friends to the meeting and play to stay after the program for refreshments and socializing.

The Wilmington Arts Center is on Route 62, one mile east of the junction of Rtes, 38 and 62. It is directly across from the Congregational Church, a large white building with a tall spire.

Stepping Stones Nursery School

Youngsters of Stepping Stones Nursery School in Wilmington will learn about physical disabilities during the week of April 26, through a special Easter Seal program sponsored by TJ Maxx.

The Easter Seal Hop-n-ing teaches children about the causes of disabilities and their effects on people's every day lives. The children also find out how wheelchairs, crutches and other specialized equipment work.

The next part of Hop-n-ing gives the kids a chance to help. They hop as many times as they can in three minutes, earning money pledged for each hop by family and friends.

Funds raised help provide Easter Seal services for men, women and children with disabilities. Services include summer camp, therapeutic swim program, home health care, physical and occupational therapy, speech therapy, equipment loan, technology for independence, support groups for people recovering from strokes and information and referral services.

Last year more than 17,000 children across Massachusetts learned about disabilities and hopped for Easter Seals, raising nearly $250,000.

Step into shape

Firefighters prepare for potential disaster

by Arlene Surprenant

When a Gulf gasoline tanker overturned on I-93 last year and its load of fuel threatened the nearby Ipswich River, the District VI Haz-Mat Response Team was quickly on the scene. As it has in the past three years, the 32 member team worked efficiently and put its training to good use to help avoid a major disaster to the Reading water supply.

Wilmington's new fire chief Dan Stewart is a member of the team, which he calls "a high precision, highly skilled organization" similar to a police SWAT team. The firefighters respond whenever there is a chemical spill or other emergency involving hazardous materials. The team, says Stewart, was formed three years ago as a result of a 1981 phosphorus trichloride leak in Somerville. That incident "overwhelmed" the Somerville Fire Department and resulted in the passage of legislation which appropriated state funds to fully equip several Haz Mat vehicles. The Massachusetts Fire Academy was also commissioned to come up with a four week intensive training course for six Haz Mat teams statewide.

Firefighters accepted into the course get 75 percent classroom education, primarily in chemistry, and 25 percent hands on training in the use of various monitoring tools and other equipment. When they are done, the graduates are certified as skilled haz mat technicians able to work together as a team.

"The men soon realize," says Stewart, "that rank is immaterial and it's the team concept that's important."

To date, the District VI team has responded to 21 incidents in its broad territory which covers 98 communities from Salisbury to Worchester to the Connecticut border. Two of those incidents were local: the overturned tanker on 93 and a chlorine leak at DryTech Corporation on Fordham Road. The team has also responded to such emergencies as an acid cloud evacuation in Leominster and a chlorine gas leak in a Lowell nursing home. The District VI team has a mutual aid agreement with Salisbury which makes it one of two teams which would respond in case of a disaster at the Seabrook power plant.

The team uses an Incident Command System to help organize and react quickly once members arrive at the scene of an emergency. The system is based on the same principle as running a company, explains Stewart, and allows the team to bring organization out of a chaotic situation.

As the members arrive at the scene, they each pick their velcro backed name tag off the incident chart and stick it on one of the assigned tasks. What makes the system work so well is the fact that all members are trained in all aspects of an operation. The first to arrive at the scene is automatically the team leader or coordinator of the operation. The first areas to be set up are the science area and the decon (decontamination) area. Those firefighters in the science area research the chemicals involved in the incident, the layout of any buildings, and the location of such things as storm drains. Those in the decon area are responsible for the decontamination of any team members. The safety officer makes sure the area is cordoned off and the men are properly suited up for the hazardous clean-up duty.

"The safety officer has the authority to stop the operation at any time," says Stewart.

One of the most delicate tasks is left to the liaison, who brings information to the local fire chief and tries to work with the local department so the team is "not coming across as cocky hot shots."

Other jobs include site control, communications, logistics, emergency medical surveillance, and setting up a staging area.

"This is the smoothest operating team I've seen while in the fire service," explains Stewart with justifiable pride.

Once they arrive at a scene, the team members get into flame retardant jumpsuits with their name and district number on it so they can be identified amid the initial confusion.

The team operates in three zones: the hot zone which is contaminated and spells danger, the warm zone which contains a health hazard, and the cold zone which is free of any contamination. Stewart said firefighters going into the hot zone to stem the spread of contamination have to be helped into a fully encapsulated level A suit to protect them from the hazardous material. There are also level B and C suits for other stages of the operation. Many of the suits, which cost $300 apiece, are disposable because of the cost of decontamination. For very serious chemical emergencies there are three silver flash suits costing $6,000 each. Anyone who is contaminated is hosed down after his part in the operation and checked for such things as blood pressure and vital signs. Sometimes the team is at a scene all day to assure there is no further danger to residents.

All of the equipment is brought to the scene by the District VI Haz Mat vehicle, a massive red truck with 10 sliding doors and canopies along the top that can be extended to keep out sun and rain. The truck contains everything needed for an emergency from air tanks, the protective clothing, and portable radios to a fax machine which allows the communication members to talk directly to a state agency or chemical manufacturer to learn more about the properties of certain materials. There are also sophisticated monitoring tools, like the Sensidyne, which tells what percentage of a chemical is in the atmosphere, and the Aim-meter, which operates on flammability and can detect any of 34 different chemicals. Though the truck carries a price tag of a quarter of a million dollars, Stewart says it's worth every penny.

The command vehicle, which is currently being equipped with computers, accompanies the Haz Mat truck on calls. Digital Equipment is helping outfit the command vehicle, says Stewart, but the Haz Mat truck is maintained by a fee structure involving each town in the district. Sometimes donations come in to help with expenses; other times, laughs the chief, "we just beg, borrow, or steal."

Wilmington is fortunate not only in having the Haz Mat truck located close by in Lowell, but in having a certified technician in the local fire department. When Lt. Ed Corcoran finishes the current training session, Wilmington will boast two certified technicians. Eventually the chief hopes to have a certified firefighter on each shift.

Is Wilmington at risk?

"We have alot of chemicals that are very hazardous, but local companies handle them in a very safe manner," says Stewart. In summation, he adds it's a plus to have trained technicians to help inspect plants and unregulated vehicles that come into town bearing dangerous materials.

weddings & engagements

Katherine Martins weds Gary Bourassa

Katherine Ann Martins, daughter of John and Ann Martins of Sheldon Avenue, Wilmington became the bride of Gary J. Bourassa, son of Robert and Elizabeth Bourassa of Salem Street, Wilmington on June 28, 1992.

The early afternoon ceremony was performed by Father Brown before the altar of St. Thomas Church. Chris Hemenway and Lori Ameen were speakers at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a full length white satin gown with lace and beaded bodice and a scalloped v-neckline. Her veil was multi-tiered with flowing matching lace. She carried a cascade of rubrim lillies, fuschia, pink and white roses accented with heather, stephanotis and ivy.

Angela Martins, sister of the bride served as maid of honor and Rhona Kysilovsky, cousin of the bride served as matron of honor. The bride's attendants included Kerry Driscoll, Monica May, Tina McNamara and Kathy Molina. Marissa Fantasia, cousin of the bride served as junior bridesmaid. Allyson Bourassa, niece of the groom, served as the flower girl.

Ronald Barber served the groom as best man while ushering duties were performed by John Martins, brother of the bride, Robert Kysilovsky and Frederick Kysilovsky, cousins of the bride, Paul Flaherty, Ken Chisholm, Jay DeMos, Roy Sargent, and Dan D'Eon, close friends of the bride and groom. Bobby Bourassa, nephew of the groom served as junior usher. Nicholas Fantasia, cousin of the bride served as ringbearer.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Indian Ridge Country Club in Andover. Following the wedding was a honeymoon trip to Aruba for a few weeks after which the new Mr. and Mrs. Bourassa returned and purchased their home in Tewksbury.

All Around Travel Update
by Peggy Lee
President
THE CARIBBEAN'S "ALL-IN-ONE" RESORTS
About 25 years ago, Club Med pioneered the concept of offering all-inclusive resorts where visitors could dine, relax and play with no charges beyond a single package price. Guests loved the freedom from worrying about their pocketbooks, and the concept caught on big time - and nowhere bigger than in the Caribbean. These days, there are many such resorts to choose from on some of the favorite fantasy destinations, including Jamaica, Antigua, Aruba, St. Martin, Margarita Island, Barbados, and even the pristine little island of San Salvador, where Columbus first stepped foot in this hemisphere. Each resort offers something special and different, from innovative children's programs to a focus on scuba diving.
ALL AROUND TRAVEL takes the time, right from the start, to find out exactly what kind of accommodations best suit your needs and to determine how we can best serve you. We are also committed to keeping your travel costs in line. We'll take the aggravation out of travel planning and replace it with exciting itinerary options, favorable rates, and unsurpassed efficiency. Celebrate National Tourism Week (May 2-8) with us at 203 Jefferson Rd., N. Wilmington (Rt. 62). Ph: 658-2313. We're open Mon-Fri 9 to 5 and by appointment.
HINT: Even the traditional policy of paying extra for alcoholic drinks is now being dropped at some single fee resorts.

Spring Home Improvement

Getting the jump on spring

Tackle these household projects now

April is Home Improvement Month, and a perfect time to give your home a spring cleaning after winter's harsh months. By taking advantage of the milder weather to tackle projects around the house now, you can get a jump on spring and improve your home's appeal and resale value.

In addition, making energy efficiency improvements this spring will help homeowners combat rising energy bills while adding more value to their homes. Here are some steps you can take to help save money year-round on your home fuel bills.

Insulate. The attic is always a great place to start your springtime clean-up. While you're up there, make sure your insulation meets new recommended levels issued recently by the Department of Energy. Informed homeowners realize that increasing insulation levels will provide year-round comfort and savings by helping to reduce the energy needed to keep their homes cool this summer and warm next winter.

If you're planning a full-home insulation upgrade, consider hiring a professional contractor to reinsulate for you. An insulation contractor will be able to insulate your entire house, including sidewalls and hard-to-reach areas in attics by using a quality blown-in product like CertainTeed's Insul-Safe III(R) Fiber Glass Insulation.

Weatherize. In many older homes that have not been weatherized, air leaks can account for up to 30 percent of a home's wasted energy. Even if you caulked and weatherstripped within the last few years, new air leaks can appear each season. Weatherizing your home now can also help reduce this summer's energy bills by helping to keep the cool air in your house.

Plant a tree. Trees and shrubs that make your yard more colorful will help reduce energy costs if they're planted strategically. Plant deciduous trees — those that drop their leaves in the fall — in front of sunny windows, to help block summer sunlight.

In the winter, sunlight will filter through the bare branches to warm your living area. Hardy, low-lying evergreens and shrubs planted close to the foundation of a house slow heat escape during the the winter, and reduce heat entry during the summer.

Add shades, blinds or awnings. Attractive window treatments that add color and beauty to your home both inside and out also help keep sunny rooms more comfortable in any season.

During warmer months, window shades or blinds drawn on sunny days help block heat from your home. Keeping them open during the winter helps warm a chilly room.

Lighten up! Homeowners waste half the electricity generated each year by keeping unoccupied rooms lit or using inefficient lighting sources. About 90 percent of the energy consumed by incandescent bulbs is given off as heat, not light. Replace them with fluorescent bulbs, which convert electricity to visible light up to five times more efficiently, and last as much as 20 times longer.

There's no better time than now to improve your home, especially when you can profit in the long run through energy savings. For more information about improving your home by reinsulating, write for a free copy of "How Much Insulation Does Your Home Really Need?" from the CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482. ‡

DO-IT-YOURSELF AND SAVE

(NAPS)—This April, celebrate Minwax® National Woodworking Month™ and discover what over sixty million Americans already know: The pride, pleasure and value to be found in doing-it-yourself. Whether you're restoring a charming flea market find or installing new kitchen cabinets, a complimentary magazine, Wood Beautiful™, can help you get started with these decorating tips from the experts at Minwax:

•Decorative moldings are a distinguishing feature in many homes. Baseboards, corner bead, chair rails and crown molding add character to any room. Easy to install, they lend themselves well to both traditional and contemporary decor.

•Play up the natural grain of unfinished wood with pastel colors that highlight the beauty and grain of the wood. For a pickled look, use only one coat of Pastels™ Wood Stain; use several coats for a deeper color. Apply Polycrylic™ Protective Finish for crystal-clear protection.

•Turn unfinished or stripped furniture into a prized possession. Apply Wood Finish for deep rich color. Then protect the piece with several coats of polyurethane, sanding lightly between coats.

•For country personality, think homey and natural when choosing design elements and finishing touches. Sporty plaids, checks and antique linens can add country casual warmth.

•Contrast rich woods with elegant fabrics such as oriental rugs or new carpets to create a traditional living room. Treat windows to flowing draperies or delicate curtains.

Buy the best as needed

Basic tool kit will cover most household projects

Whether you are an avid, every weekend do-it-yourselfer or simply an occasional dabbler in home repair and maintenance, basic tools are needed to tackle most household projects.

The key is to buy tools as you need them, and to get the best quality you can afford. Look for names such as 3M and NewStroke.

Good tools are safer and easier to use. They may even inspire you to better craftsmanship!

Here's what you need:

• Curved-claw hammer, putty knife, scratch awl, power drill, good paint brush for cleaning and touchups, quality sandpaper in various grits and an all-purpose super-strength adhesive.

• A retractable steel ruler, combination square, level.

• Toilet plunger, drain auger.

• Safety goggles, sanding and fiberglass insulation respirator.

• A crosscut saw, hacksaw, circular saw and saber saw.

• Standard screwdrivers (three sizes), Phillips screwdrivers (three sizes), power screwdriver, needle-nose pliers, locking-grip pliers, slip-joint pliers. ‡

LAWN AND GARDEN TIPS

Japanese Beetle Defense

(NAPS)—Since being introduced into this country in 1916, Japanese beetles have become a perennial nuisance to home gardeners in the eastern United States. Unmistakable in their metallic green and copper-colored armor, adult insects emerge from the soil in the late spring or early summer to feast on the leaves, flowers and fruit of more than 300 different kinds of plants.

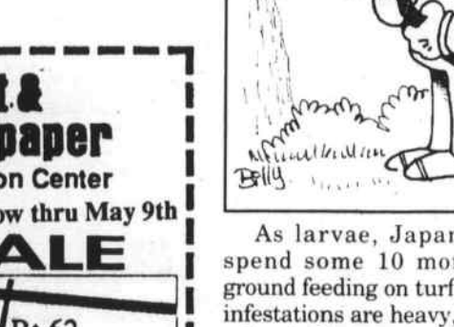

As larvae, Japanese beetles spend some 10 months underground feeding on turfgrass roots. If infestations are heavy, these cream-colored, C-shaped grubs can leave behind weakened or even dead patches in your lawn.

Gardeners constantly experiment with new ways to control Japanese beetles. One method is to apply SEVIN® brand carbaryl insecticide. The granular formulation is a convenient way to control grubs in lawns

If you like gardening, you'll want to know what's happening
this week at Mahoney's.

Plan Before You Plant
If landscaping is on your spring list, now is the best time to formulate your plans. Here's just a few reasons why:
Spring is the perfect time to plant. The temperatures are warmer, but not too hot. There's plenty of water in the ground. And the sooner you plant the more time the roots have to strengthen and grow.
Another reason to plan now is that at this time of year Mahoney's selection is at it's biggest. You'll get the best selection to pick from; trees, shrubs, annuals, perennials, groundcover etc. It's all here, in stock.
And if you have questions about your plans, bring them in with you. We have experts in every area; from Azaleas to Zinnias, who are here to help.
So plan to make the most of this spring. Visit Mahoney's soon.

2 Gallon Azaleas
Need an extra dash of color? Our huge selection of red, white, pink or purple 2 gallon Azaleas are just beginning to bloom and are available at a fantastic price. Don't miss out! Reg. $14.98

Fixing a broken window

One area around the house prone to damage is windows. Broken branches, debris, snow and ice, or maybe a baseball, can crack or break a pane.

Replacing glass isn't easy, but here are the steps and tools you will need.

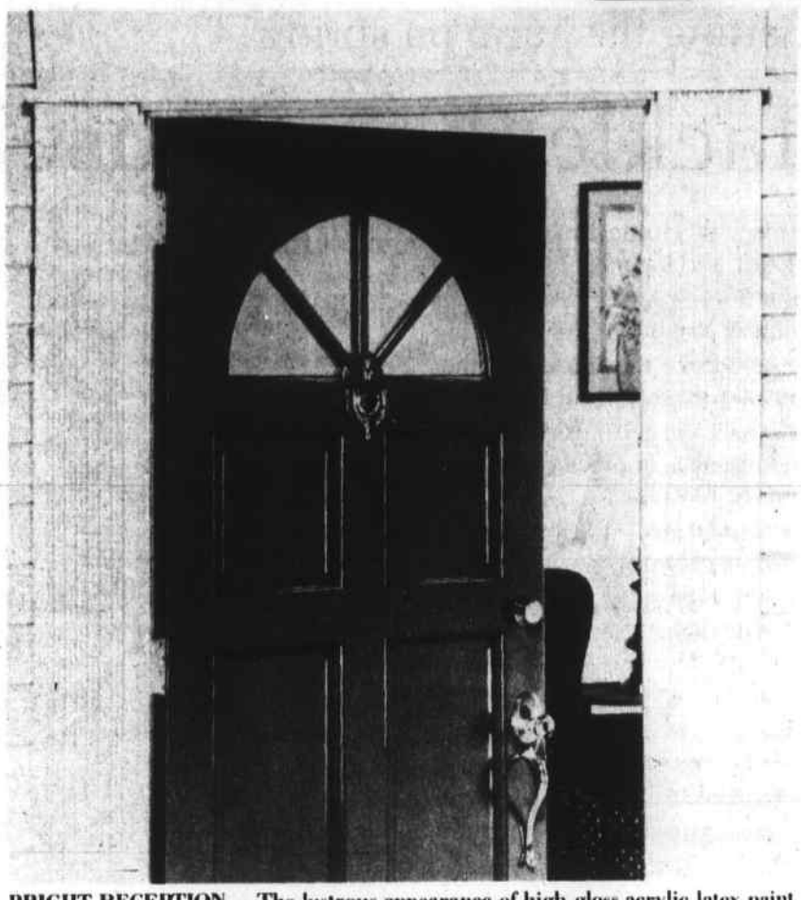

Purchase the needed pane at the neighborhood hardware or glass store, where it can be cut to size. When measuring the dimensions of the window opening, deduct one-sixteenth of an inch from the length and width. The pane must be slightly smaller than the opening.

Wear gloves when removing the old glass. Take out as much as you can, but do not force any piece that resists. It will come out when the old putty is removed. The old putty usually will yield easily to scraping. Sometimes it may have to be softened with a soldering iron.

If the pane is held in place with glazier's points, remove them. Flip them out with the blade of a screwdriver or pull them out with pliers. Old points can be used again, but you may want to get new ones.

After positioning the new pane in the frame, use a new kind of window glazing that provides a weather resistant seal. 3M's Press-In-Place Window Glazing is a preshaped strip that comes in a roll. Unroll it to the required length, cut with scissors, press it firmly into place with your finger and remove the protective liner. The glazing can be painted immediately.

If you want to try cutting the replacement glass yourself, remember these tips: the glass cutter should be held almost vertically; apply firm, even pressure to the cutter after its wheel has been lubricated with a small amount of household oil; use one of two methods to break the glass (wear gloves) — hold the pane on either side of the cut and bend slightly, or hold the length of the glass on a flat surface with the line of cut on the edge and break off the scrap. ‡

BRIGHT RECEPTION — The lustrous appearance of high gloss acrylic latex paint makes the perfect first impression on visitors entering this home. The new paint product is equally impressive on walls, windows, trim and shutters.

Your home can look like a castle with new high gloss latex paint

Nothing tells the world so much about you as the appearance of your home. And it's the outside of your home that says the most.

Whether you live in a townhouse or ranch house, you want your home to look the best it possibly can. And that's a lot easier now that there's a high gloss acrylic latex paint.

The high gloss look can add a sparkling new dimension to almost any part of your home's exterior — walls, doors, windows, trim, shutters, even gutters and downspouts.

It's a good choice too for other outdoor painting projects, things like fences, trellises, lampposts, planters and flower boxes.

High gloss acrylic latex paint comes in a variety of bright, elegant hues that give your home that just-painted look, year after year. In fact, long-lasting tint retention is one of the paint's real plusses.

Hard to beat for durability

And when it comes to durability, it's hard to beat high gloss acrylic latex paint. It does an excellent job of sealing outdoor wood against cracking, blistering, peeling or flaking due to harsh weather and sun damage.

But part of the product's beauty will be visible only to you, and not your neighbors. That's the beautiful way in which you can clean up brushes and rollers with just soap and water after finishing your high gloss acrylic latex painting projects.

Technology brings new dimension to wood finishing

Americans have had a long love affair with the beauty of natural wood. So it is significant that a new product — available for the first time to consumers in the U.S. — is making real wood finishes practical for all sorts of projects around the house.

Red Devil, Inc. — the Union, N.J.-based maker of caulks, sealants and tools — has introduced an extraordinary new wood veneer product called paper-backed, high-grade veneer available in cedar, cherry, oak and walnut. This is a real wood that can be applied to virtually any hard surface.

Wood•Works is a product you can use to refinish nicked and battered file cabinets and stereo speakers, bring new life to old bookcases or tables, and enhance crafts and hobby projects.

Long popular in Europe, Wood•Works Natural Wood Veneer is the result of dramatic new technology that involves precision cutting highgrade logs to a continuous roll wood. The product is being sold through home centers, hardware stores and specialty hobby and craft retailers nationwide.

Unlike traditional veneers, Wood•Works may be applied to most surfaces with a standard adhesive. No special skill or tools are required. Just scissors, adhesive and a wood finish are needed to complete the job.

Think safety in your workshop

Good workshop habits start with shop safety. Yet many people who handle fix-it projects around the house still don't pay attention to the word "safety."

Here are some common, sensible shop ideas and tips that should be followed and passed along to sons and daughters:

Mentally rehearse the project before starting. This will help you anticipate some of the problems that may develop. Use clamps when possible, so you have two free hands.

Copy the professionals by taking the necessary precautions to avoid inhaling dust, dirt and other airborne contaminants. Wear a respirator for dusty jobs, such as sanding a drywall patch. One good item is the 3M sanding and fiberglass insulation respirator.

Don't wear any loose clothing that could be caught in shop machinery.

Wear safety goggles to prevent chips and dust from entering eyes. Purchase a name brand that gives a quality performance and provides venting. Buy goggles that are roomy so they sit comfortably over eyeglasses.

Increase table saw safety when using your miter gauge. To prevent the workpiece from drifting (being pulled) toward the blade as you cut it, make the miter gauge extension slip-proof. To do this, simply affix sandpaper to the face of the extension board. Apply self-adhering sandpaper. 3M packages 3 2/3 x 7 1/2 inch sheets that can be cut in half lengthwise. Then, as needed, strip off the protective backing and secure sandpaper to the extension board.

Before using power tools, read the instructions. Make sure cords and outlets are properly grounded. Unplug any tool when changing blades or bits. Maintain all tools. Keep blades sharp, and keep moving parts clean and lubricated.

Keep a fire extinguisher and first aid kit readily available. Tell someone when and where you are working, and never work in a place where you can't be heard if you call for help. ‡

New epoxy cartridges help to ease concrete and masonry assembly jobs

To many do-it-yourselfers, setting fence posts, wrought iron railings or anything else into concrete driveways, decks, patios or into brick, cinder block or concrete block can often be a tough, slow process. The most common practice is to drill a hole, then insert either a plastic plug, lead shield or a sleeve anchor into the hole. The component to be fastened is then placed over the hole and a threaded member is then placed through the component and into the anchor. It is tightened until firm.

The plague of most DIY'ers are anchors that do not grip the walls of the hole properly. Unless some measures are taken to prevent the anchor from spinning in the hole while the mating part is being torqued, a tight fit cannot be achieved.

Many home handymen have found epoxy mortars to be a faster and better way of anchoring into concrete or masonry. All that is necessary is to drill the hole, inject the mortar mix into the hole, install a section of threaded rod, wait the required setting time, then position the fixture and tighten the mating member to the threaded rod. One of the problems of using this technique is the tendency to prepare more epoxy mortar than the job requires. Also, many people have a problem of batch mixing the proper amounts of resin and hardener. This makes it difficult to ascertain if the quality of the mix is suitable for the application.

To overcome this difficulty, self-contained cartridges comprised of both resin and hardener are now on the market. One supplier, The Rawlplug Company of New Rochelle, N.Y., offers two cartridge sizes to match the needs of most applications. Each cartridge of Chem-Fast™ has premeasured amounts of vinyl ester resin, quartz sand aggregate and hardener. The hardener is contained in a separate compartment within the cartridge. Rawl supplies a T-shaped mixing plunger which, when inserted into the hardener tube, injects the hardener into the resin. By pumping the plunger, the components are mixed neatly and safely and in the proper proportions. Once mixing has been completed, a dispensing nozzle is attached to the cartridge, which is then inserted into a standard heavy duty caulking gun for manual dispensing of the mortar.

The mortar bonds the threaded rod to the base material. No expansion forces are exerted, which makes the mortar ideal for use in anchoring to a variety of base materials ranging from soft common brick to hard marble or granite. Special screen tubes are available for dispensing the mortar into brick, cement block and other hollow masonry base materials.

By eliminating batch mixing, the self-contained Chem-Fast cartridge has taken the guesswork out of blending hardener with resin, which improves the bonding quality of the mortar. It also makes do-it-yourself assembly work in concrete and masonry fast and easy. Chem-Fast cartridges are available in most home center and hardware outlets.

The ABC's of Mulching and Composting

It's easier to have a green thumb with the right lawn care products to give you a hand.

Mulching and composting are two easy methods of recycling that homeowners can rely on to drastically reduce the amount of yard debris dumped in public landfills, while helping develop healthy soil for their lawns and gardens.

Mulch

Healthy, conditioned soil is essential to successful gardening. Whether it's creating a new lawn or garden or maintaining an existing one, the recipe for success is as simple as getting back to basics. In many gardens, adding a mulch may be the only step necessary to keep things in balance.

Composed of organic or inorganic materials such as wood chips, bark, straw and gravel, mulch cushions plants against the adverse effects of the wind, sun and rain. It moderates soil temperatures, deters weeds and improves the overall soil structure.

Shredding yard and garden material into mulch is easy with the new and improved Chipper/Shredder/Mulcher (CS-3500) from Flowtron Outdoor Products. Quick and efficient, this three-stage chipping system reduces piles of lawn clippings, thatch, trimmings and branches up to two and one-half inches in diameter into decorative and useful garden mulch.

Leaves can be recycled into mulch, as well, with the lightweight and inexpensive Flowtron Electric Leaf-Eater (LE-900). Designed for use atop a trash container or on its own legs, this durable machine reduces eight bags of wet or dry leaves into one bag of valuable mulch. The bagged leaf shreds should then be spread in four to six-inch layers over soil, and under trees and shrubs.

The mulch acts as a protective cover for the soil and roots. When mixed into the soil, mulch introduces important nutrients that promote root growth. During dry spells, mulches help protect the soil from the evaporative effects of sun and wind, and keeps the soil from drying out and hardening.

Ideally, mulch should be loose and airy when placed over the soil, rather than compacted. Less compaction means healthier roots and a more active exchange of water and food beneath the soil. In the event of heavy rains, mulch also prevents the leaching of plant nutrients, and reduces the effects of soil erosion.

Compost

Where mulch is primarily used as a top-dressing, compost is considered one of the ultimate soil conditioners. Compost is made from just about anything organic, such as vegetable and fruit rinds, hedge trimmings, sawdust, leaves, eggshells, etc. Avoid using fatty meat scraps and similar waste as it decomposes at a slower rate, creates odor and often attracts dogs and rodents to your compost pile. Because smaller pieces compost faster, it is also wise to avoid material thicker than one-quarter inch. Use the Chipper/Shredder/Mulcher from Flowtron to reduce larger pieces to more usable sizes.

Once the materials are gathered, the simplest way to make compost is in a pile or in special bins designed specifically for composting. But whether you choose a pile or a bin, it is important to select a convenient, well-drained spot without direct sunlight for maximum composting action.

The best compost piles are formed in layers. Start with a bottom layer of brush to support the pile and help aerate it. Continue adding alternating, but equal layers of slow-decaying material such as leaves, woodchips, sawdust and fast-decaying materials such as grass clippings and food wastes. Then, add a compost activator and a two-inch layer of garden soil. Remember to moisten each layer thoroughly as it is added to speed the decomposition process.

Making great compost, however, is not as simple as just using the right ingredients. As the compost begins to break down and create heat, care must be taken to systematically turn the pile. Turning the compost with a pitchfork or aerator tool every few days moves composted material away from the center of the pile, and replaces it with partially composted material. This process also allows the opportunity to add more shredded green and dry matter.

When mixed into the planting bed or lawn, finished compost has the ability to hold nutrients in the soil like a sponge and release them slowly as needed to hungry plants. It also contains large amounts of microorganisms beneficial to plant growth. Essentially, the composting process changes the nutrients of otherwise unwanted yard and house waste into beneficial forms that plants can thrive on.

A TO Z LAWN CARE

HOME & GARDEN FEATURES

REVITALIZE YOUR LAWN – Fall is the perfect time to rework a tired summer lawn. Top-dress thinned-out turf and bare patches with Canadian Peat to yield a luscious carpet of green in springtime.

Bare patches, brown spots and thinned-out turf – these are the results of a lawn that has taken a serious summertime beating. As fall approaches, however, evening and daytime temperatures start to cool and lawns can be reworked into a carpet of green in just seven simple steps.

Fall is the best time to improve the lawn because autumn's above average rainfall and moderate temperatures provide perfect conditions for germinating grass seed. The plants will become established over the winter, yielding a beautiful lawn come spring.

Poor soil is the most common culprit for lackluster lawns. That is why so many solutions focus on improving the grass' growing medium with organic matter, such as Canadian Sphagnum Peat Moss. This soil amendment retains up to 20 times its weight in water, stores nutrients, binds sand, aerates clay and creates a perfect environment in which grass will flourish.

Begin lawn renovation projects by taking a good look at the turf and analyzing its specific problems. Is it thinned out or patchy? Is there a profileration of weeds? Decide which of the following steps is the therapy needed to improve the lawn for a more beautiful landscape next spring:

Lackluster Lawn – Poor soil is a likely cause. This is especially true in housing developments where sod is laid on a thin layer of top soil over foundation clay or sandy soil. The main weakness of lawn soils that are predominantly sand or clay is a shortage of organic material. Without this, soil can't hold water and nutrients to make it available to grass roots. Top dressing is the solution.

Top dressing consists of Canadian Peat, vermiculite and lawn foods, applied just before the lawn needs to be cut.

insects and diseases.

Monsanto, the company whose Greensweep Ten Minute Lawn Care Products help many homeowners have a green thumb, is offering a once-in-a-lifetime challenge to the communities of Greenfield, CA and Greeneville, TN. Those "green" communities will participate in a two-month competition in which each will create a city beautification program and get the entire town involved.

Called "The Great Greensweep Green-Up," the program stresses community pride and friendly competition. Monsanto will provide "seed" money to help community organizations get their beautification projects underway. Homeowners in each town will get free Greensweep Lawn Care Products to use in their yards. One of these "green" communities will be named "America's Emerald City" on May 15.

The grass could be greener on your side of the fence if you heed these tips from the Monsanto experts, makers of Greensweep Ten Minute Lawn Care Products.

• Water your grass early in the day and allow it to dry off by sundown to help curb the spread of lawn fungus and disease.

• To mow and grow a better lawn, be sure your lawn gets a half-inch of water every five days during the growing season. Deep, infrequent watering encourages deep, healthy root growth.

• Apply a selective weed and feed product in the spring to prevent broadleaf weeds like dandelion and chicken weed from robbing your lawn of nutrients and moisture.

• To minimize stress on your lawn, adjust mower blades to a cutting height of two-and-a-half inches in the spring and raise blades to three inches in the fall.

•To help control lawn damage, apply a lawn insecticide in early spring while surface feeding insects are active.

• The best way to control crabgrass, is apply a pre-emergent crabgrass preventer to stop it before it starts to grow.

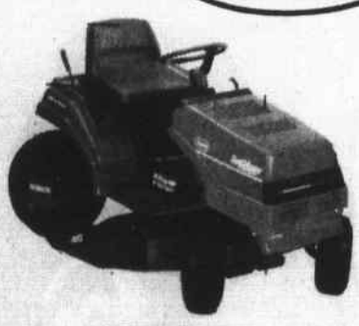

• Aerate your lawn to introduce oxygen into the turf, and leave grass clippings on the lawn to decay and return organic matter to the soil over the mowing season.

•Collect and discard accumulated leaves, sticks and droppings from trees to help prevent lawn

Tickets will be available at the gate, or call (617) 862-5333 for more information.

White tigers

The last time the Hawthorn White Tigers performed at the Shriners Circus in Wilmington, trainer Wade Burck ended up with over 250 stitches on his face and upper body when he was attacked trying to defend his favorite cat from a feisty cage mate.

That was in 1980 and Burck, who retired from training the big cats two years later is now training animal trainers. The white tigers, however, are still performing and will be returning to Shriners Auditorium in Wilmington for this seven day engagement.

'Music in the Air' debuts May 16

The public is invited to "Music in the Air," an organ and piano music program to be held Sunday, May 16 at 2 p.m.The program will feature pianist Maybelle Bliss and organists Carolyn Stanhope and Aloha Jaynes, who will play a selection of popular favorites for the enjoyment of the audience. Stanhope will also lead a spirited sing-a-long at the end of the show.

The musical program is sponsored by the Wilmington Council for the Arts and will be held in the Wilmington Arts Center opposite the Congregational Church. Admission is free.

Program for junior class

The administration of Tewksbury Public Schools has announced that the Guidance Department will present a program for junior class students and their parents on May 18. The program is entitled: Planning for Your Future: The College Application Process and will be held on May 18 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the auditorium of Tewksbury Memorial High School (TMHS).

The program is at no cost for Tewksbury students and their parents and will feature James Montague, associate director for admissions and guidance services at the college board. Mr. Montague's presentation is designed to assist students and their parents in decision making as it relates to preparation for and application to college and will address academic requirements, college admission decisions, the college search process, admission testing, and financial aid.

For future information about this informative program, please call the guidance counselors, Mr. Henri Dufour, Ms. M. Elisabeth Gaffney or Mr. John Maloy at (508) 851-3771 in the guidance office at TMHS or Dr. Michele DeAngelis at (508) 640-9658 in the student services office.

Reception for Rep. Marianne Brenton

A reception will be held for State Representative Marianne Brenton on Friday, April 30, 1993 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Casa di Fior, 128 West St., Wilmington. Rep. Brenton was recently elected to her second term in office and has been active on issues ranging from education reform to transportation to the protection of women.

Also attending the reception will be special guests, Congressman Peter Torkildsen of the 6th District. A donation of $35 is requested from those interested in attending. For more information contact Ted Tripp at 657-5659.

Chamber hosts Business Expo

Hat's off to Wilmington Chamber of Commerce. While other Chambers show tough financial times, and declining memberships, Wilmington's Chamber has continued to grow. Membership has increased by 20 percent with 17 of the new members exhibiting in Expo '93.

The Chamber is driven by dedicated members who are active participants in the various ongoing programs and meetings geared to networking, educating, and appreciation of other chamber businesses and the future economic growth in the community.

Since September, 15 enthusiastic members have worked long and hard putting together the third annual business to business Expo. Their hours of hard work will soon pay off for over 80 exhibitors. On May 6, a variety of needs will be met under one roof. Industrial, service, retail, contractors, health screening exhibits will answer questions, show products and listen to your needs. Come see what the local business community has to offer. Qualified, professional businesses offering competitive prices, and unsurpassed service will welcome you on May 6 from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Casa di Fior, 128 West Street, Wilmington (I-93 Exit 38). Admission free, door prize drawing coupons available at entrance.

Women's Club plant sale

The Wilmington Women's Club will hold its annual plant sale Saturday, May 22 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the home of Mary Woods, 191 Wildwood St.

In addition to the usual healthy geraniums, the sale will feature impatients and petunias in assorted colors. Other plants will be available on order and geraniums may be reserved by calling Mary Woods at 658-4433. There will be refreshments on hand, and as always the public is invited.

West Int. PAC meets May 5

The next meeting of the West Intermediate School PAC will be held Wednesday, May 5 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the school library.

All parents of West students are invited to attend.

ARE YOU PROTECTED?
by Edward H. Wilkens
BATHTUB RISKIER THAN SPACE

QUESTION: I know that a lot of accidents happen in bathtubs. How can tubs be made safer?

ANSWER: Astronaut John Glenn, was almost killed in a bathtub fall. Bathtubs are riskier than space travel.

All tubs should have non-skid bottoms. A mat or strips with a slightly abrasive top and an adhesive backing takes a minute to install on the bottom of the tub. Rubber mats with suction cups will work too.

Sturdy grab-bars along tub or shower walls are a must for the elderly. Towel racks will not support your weight. Don't depend on them.

Bathtubs can be risky — especially for older people. Yet, it is so simple to protect.

TOO MANY people are injured in bathtub falls. Tubs can be made safer with very little effort.

Wilmington police news

During the week ending April 27, Wilmington police officers responded to 33 alarms, five assaults and two burglaries. They made five arrests, investigated eight reports of disorderly conduct and quieted a domestic problem. Four larcenies were reported, a motor vehicle and two people were reported missing, medical assistance was rendered on three occasions and five animal related complaints were logged.

Five non-criminal complaints were taken, 10 public services were performed, four restraining orders were issued and two threat complaints were checked out.

Six traffic accidents were investigated, two traffic services were completed, three trail bike complaints were taken, alert neighbors reported 13 incidents of suspicious activity and there were three environmental complaints.

Arrests

Juan L. Falu, 21 of Woburn was arrested Wednesday afternoon by Officer Mike Begonis. Falu was charged with refusing to stop on signal by a police officer and defective equipment. He was bailed for Thursday at Woburn District Court.

At 7 p.m. Friday, Officer Steven LaRivee arrested Douglas Burpee, 27 of Barbara Avenue. The arrest was made on High Street where Burpee was charged with operating under the influence of liquor and operating after revocation of his drivers license. He was bailed for Monday at Woburn District Court.

Early Saturday morning William Bulpett, 29 of Burlington was arrested by officers Jepson and Bruce. Bulpett was charged with motor vehicle offenses and released on bail.

Monday afternoon a Peabody man was arrested after officers investigated a theft from Wilmington Builders Supply. Michael Micalizzi, 34 was charged with larceny over $250 and trespassing on railroad property after he was located walking the tracks near the center.

A second individual fled the scene in a red automobile. Tools were recovered behind Action Glass company in the square that were later identified as being stolen from Builders Supply, Spartin Hardware in North Reading and Home Depot.

Micalizzi was released after posting $425 in bail.

Elder legal services

Wednesday, May 5 the paralegal from Elder Legal Services project will be at the Senior Center from 10 a.m. to noon. If you have having a problem with any federal or state program the paralegal will try to help you. If it can not be solved at the center, the information will be taken back to an attorney. If it is a personal legal problem, you will be referred to an attorney from the Mass. Bar Association.

May's arriving

Well, another month has slipped away. Unfortunately we did not see much better weather in April than we did all winter. Let us not despair. May has been the month we all wait for. It has been my favorite. It puts life back in the ground, the grass turns a beautiful green, and the flowers come forth with an array of beautiful colors. We feel the warmth of the sun and see the beautiful blue sky. With all this beauty of nature around us, how can we not feel good?

Try a hobby

Being cooped up for so many months in the house, now it is time to go to the center and check out all the programs that will give you a hobby, that will occupy your time when in or out of your house next winter. Why not try out art class on Monday afternoon 1-3. Now this is a very good hobby that you can enjoy for many years. It does not matter how hold you get. It is the perfect way to relax, and you can take it with you no matter where you go. The teacher is excellent and the students are very friendly.

Ceramics is another hobby that can be enjoyed at any age. This class is held every Wednesday morning from 9 to noon.

How would you like to learn to make a nice wooden article for yourself or a nice wooden toy for a grandchild? You can, in the shop class every Thursday morning from 9 to noon. The teacher is a very talented person willing to teach a hobby you can spend many enjoyable hours on.

The craft class has many talented people ready and eager to teach you how to make beautiful craft articles, you can make at home. When you start making them it will be hard to put them down. The craft class is on Wednesday morning from 9 to noon.

How many times have you looked at a chair and wished you could recover it yourself? In our new upholstery class you will learn how to change seat covers under the instructions of Ray Allen, a professional upholsterer.

Never too late

It does not mean because we get older we cannot learn a new hobby. Come and join the other seniors in the classes and you will see how fast you can get involved. You may want to join not just one class, but several. That is alright. All the classes are taught by volunteers (except the ceramic). Therefore they are free to Wilmington seniors. All you have to do is buy any material needed for the class.

Other reasons

As we age we should keep busy after retiring from a job or after the children have moved from the home to their own home an older person will start to feel lonely and rejected. They will start to slip into depression. Many will turn to abusing alcohol. This is becoming a serious problem. A few years ago health professionals were ignoring it. Some were even tolerating it feeling the older person was not hurting anyone and if they were enjoying it, leave them alone.

Alcohol abuse

Now that has changed drastically as they learned the effect alcohol has on the mind and body. It slows down the brain, impairs mental alertness and coordination increasing the risk of a fall or driving accident. It can affect the liver, heart, kidneys and stomach. Alcohol abuse is not the hobby anyone needs. It is much more pleasurable to join one or more of our classes, meet some nice people. Socialize at our monthly socials. That is the only way to enjoy those retirement years.

May social

The May therapeutic social will be a dinner dance at the Tewksbury/Wilmington Elks Hall May 20. It will be a chicken dinner with all the trimmings. Music will be provided by the Big Band Sounds of Chet Harnden. Sign up for this social will be Tuesday, May 4 from 9:30 a.m. A $4 non-refundable deposit will be required when signing up. Table numbers will be assigned. Please do not ask to sign up for another senior unless he/she is your spouse. If for reasons of employment during the hours the center is opened from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., call the director at 658-2258 or 657-7595.

of the school and the type of education his son had received before he graduated from the Tech.

"Your money's being well spent at Shawsheen Tech," he said.

Selectmen Chairman Chester Bruce reminded voters there was no place to get the money without going for an override. Finance Committee Chairman Tom Casey promised Lyons, if the town was in a better financial position later, it could help out the school. Voters turned down Lyons' request.

All the money articles (Articles 6-11) passed easily with little discussion. Some residents expressed concern that the new central phone system might prevent the town from hooking up to the 911 emergency line. Caira allayed their fears. Town Hall will be getting a new furnace with the same BTUs as the old one. A small amount of asbestos will be removed. The fire department will be getting a new fire engine pumper at a projected cost of $230,000. Also approved was computer equipment and classroom furniture for the school system, four cruisers for the police department, a pickup truck for the DPW, and a new roof for the Woburn Street School.

Boys' three to five Division
Magic vs Nuggets

The Magic goals were scored by David Silva and James Holden.

Outstanding soccer was played by keeper Matt Bayles, with super hustle from Selim Fernandez and Derek Tynan.

The Nuggets replied with a goal from Mike Downs on assists by Brian Maxwell and Chris Van Asselberg.

The defense was highlighted by the great saves of Nugget keeper Josh Howlett, who was supported by the efforts of defender Rob Rogers.

Bulls vs Celtics

This closely fought match ended in a 2-2 tie, with goals from the Bulls' Kyle Burns (two) and the Celtics' Kyle Hendricks and Ryan Thibodeau.

Other fine plays were made by Bulls' defender Justin Brady, forward Pat Cucinotta and forward/keeper Chris Capozzi, who had four chances on net.

Meanwhile, John Dulong set up one Celtics' score as teammates Jason Ponte and keepers Stephen O'Dea and Daniel Liberty played excellent games.

Knicks vs Trailblazers

Great teamwork and passes between Brian Aldrich and scorer Chuck DiDomenico led to the only Knick goal in an exhausting 1-1 tie.

Other Knicks having fine games were keepers Jarred Sawyer and Dana Mahoney.

The Trailblazers countered with a goal from Jonathan Towle, with offensive support from Justin Cammerata and David Rappoli.

The Blazer defense was led by keeper Ryan Gaudet and defenders Andrew Patalano and James Devine.

Girls' one-two Division
Emeralds vs Diamonds

Goals for the Emeralds were scored by Courtney Hassey, Kelly Sullivan and Keri Gillespie, resulting in a 3-3 tie. The defense was led by the great plays of Joanne Demars and Kristen Broussard and keeper Nicole Zarella in net.

Supported by a total team effort, forwards Jolene Barry, Jennifer Leone and Andrea Batten scored goals for the Diamonds.

Topaz vs Rubies

Michaela Rufo and Kimberly Thibault scored the goals for the Topaz. Goalkeeper Jennifer Gillis played an excellent game.

The Rubies responded with a goal by Caty Michaud and great stops by keepers Ashley Morgado and Christine McInerney.

Other great plays were made by Marie Sampson, Jessica Kelleher and Athena Karalekas.

Sapphires vs Opals

Joanne Emerick, Katie Houle and Mary-Kate Griffin played great defense for the Sapphires, holding their opponent to one goal.

Also turning in outstanding performances were Sapphire keeper Shaina Vieira and forwards Caitlin Nee and Tara Insalaco.

The Opals struck back with a goal from Danielle Maison. Her efforts were supported by Katie Halas, Holly Flynn, Emily Maloney and Leah DeMaggio.

Boys' One Division
Legion of Doom vs
Bushwackers

Scoring for the Legion of Doom were Gregory Zanni and Tony Ruggerio, with good hustle and defense by Dan DelRossi, Michael Cullen and Richard Hupper.

Chad Maderia scored the Bushwackers' goal, while keepers John Cuoco and Paul Maison played an outstanding game in net.

Power and Glory
vs Macho Men

Power and Glory goals were put in by Dave Demango (two), Dennis Robillard, Mike Kelly and Greg Irving. Matt David and Chad Cochran also played well for the Power.

The Macho Men had a very good game, with Tom Deechan scoring a goal and Brian Axelrod playing a great game in net.

Supporting them on offense were Adam McCauley and Greg Phillips, with great defensive plays by Joey Caira and Dan Cwiekowski.

Hulkamaniacs vs
Natural Disasters

Dan Hurley, Derek Trueira, Derek Liberty, Bill Nee and keepers Walter Varey and Sean Godding all played excellent soccer.

The goal scoring was supported by strong passing by the Hulkamaniacs.

British Bulldogs vs
Ultimate Warriors

Great scoring for the Bulldogs by Brandon Marshall (three) and Steven Caino, with an outstanding game in net by keepers Zachary Mitzan and Derek Kucinski.

Good ballhandling by Joey Giordano and Brian Schell, supported by the defense of David DiGuardia.

The Ultimate Warriors responded with a solid effort from the entire team.

Buckeyes vs Crusaders

Booting in goals for the Buckeyes were Pat McDonough, Pat Maloney and Thomas Duffy. Adam Costantino and Steve Gravallese along with goalie Nick Gibson played great defense.

Displaying hustle for the Crusaders were John Martin, Corey Maison, Jordan Cammarata and Bryan Langone, with strong defense by Chad Paquin and some super saves by goalie Stephen Crawford.

Hurricanes vs
Running Rebels

Hurricanes forwards Greg Buck and Derek Bruce played strong games, with Jared Smith and Daniel Zuccaro adding an excellent defense along with goaltenders Jason Guston and Michael Hiltz.

Adding extra effort was Derek Bruce scoring a goal and breaking the tie with 30 seconds left in the game.

Wildcat Mite C's

MVC baseball

Wildcats scare Warriors

Wilmington High School's baseball squad went all-out after the Andover Golden Warriors in Andover last Thursday, and unfortunately emerged on the losing end, 5-3 but showed the two time Division I champs they can and will scratch back.

Wilmington scored in the first, third and fifth innings. Bob Beals walked, stole second and scored on a Mike Alonardo double in the first.

Aprile scored in the third after hitting a single, a hit and run moved Tom to second and the errant throw allowed Tom to score.

Daryl Grant later got a lead off single followed by a Kevin McArthur triple scored the third and final run.

Daryl Grant started and went three and two-thirds innings when Mike Alanardo came in and shut the door for three and a third innings.

Tom Aprile, Tom Killilea and Daryl Grant got singles with Mike Alanardo (double) and Kevin McArthur (triple) rounded out the Cats' hitting.

The Running Rebels Matt Goldblatt scored the team's only goal, with Walter Meehan assisting.

Great defense was played by Stephen Brennick and goalie Luke Gennetti.

Huskies vs Wolverines

A very strong defense for the Huskies by Derek Hanley and goalie Mark Hodder in the second half. An overpowering offensive lineup by Archie Deletter, Joe Guzinski and Derek Hanley scored the Husky goals.

The Wolverines played a very strong game, with Alfred Baddlato and Derek Coutrois accounting for the two goals. Great offense and defense was played by all, including Mark Capozzi, Denny O'Connell, Frank Scaffidi and Paul Sferrazza.

Girls' Division
Willows vs Dogwoods

Great defense by both teams highlighted this scoreless game with the Willows' Maddisen Getchell at center and Jessica Carlino at forward.

In back playing defense were Samantha Mahoney and goalie Jackie Robarge.

The Dogwoods played a great game, with forwards Kristin Burns and Sarah Cheek displaying great hustle along with Laura Labbe in goal.

Rowdies vs Power Source

Rowdies' star Marianna Phillips played excellent defense along with goalie Kendall O'Dea. Strong plays by Cheryl Kelley at forward and Sarah Lund scored a point for the team.

Power Source's Rebecca Rufo at forward penetrated the defense for the team's only goal, with aggressive defense by Emily Lockhart and Amanda Gustin.

Tiger Lillies vs
Snap Dragons

Great all-around play by the Tiger Lillies, with Shannon Fahey (three) and Lauren Cushing scoring goals.

Great plays were also made by Allison Flynn and Katherine Chin.

The Snap Dragons scored a goal with Dawn DeRosa and Kaitlyn Dulong showing great hustle, along with good defense by Jacqueline Grady, Andrea Athanassiou and goalies Elyse Gambardella and Gino Ranno.

Foxgloves vs Dandylions

Great offense was the key to the Foxgloves effort, with Kara Bruce scoring two goals.

Great offensive and defensive plays were made by Brynna Moroney, Andrea Gomez, Kellianne Sweeney and the entire Foxgloves team.

The Dandylions played an aggressive, all-around game with Ashley Rollinson at defense and Valerie Zarella playing keeper.

Super plays were also made by Emily Dorrance and Jacki Spry, who scored her team's only goal.

Riptide vs Flash

The powerful Riptide offense was led by the goal scoring of Kristen Pelletier (two), Kristal Mackie (one) and Danielle Meegan (one). Keeper Robin Kanter excelled in goal.

The Flash responded with a goal from Elizabeth Veligor, while Jessica Kanach and Tara Scola played aggressively.

The Flash defense was keyed by Marya Grace and the outstanding efforts of Allison Crawford.

Squirt C's take title

Wilmington's Squirt C's recently captured their division title and moved on to the playoffs.

On April 12 the Squirt C's won an exciting semifinal playoff game against Methuen by a score of 4-2.

On April 14 the team played the Peabody Flames in the final round of playoffs, but lost in an outstanding game by a score of 5-4.

Bay State Games events

Wilmington's Robinson completes outstanding career

Maureen Robinson of Wilmington recently completed an outstanding career with the Northeastern University women's ice hockey team.

Robinson's final year with the Red and Black proved to be her finest, as she set career highs with 11 goals, 14 assists and 25 points, while playing for one of the most powerful offenses in the nation. She finished her four year stint at NU with 31 goals and 34 assists.

In 1992-93, the veteran forward started quickly by recording a hat trick and adding an assist in the Huskies's season opener versus Boston College.

She then potted a goal and set up another against powerful Brown University. In all, Robinson scored in four of the Huskies' first five games.

Northeastern continued it's winning tradition this season, compiling a 14-7-3 overall record and finishing third in the ECAC with a 10-5-2 mark.

Robinson helped the Huskies into the ECAC semifinals by scoring a goal in their 5-1 first round victory over Princeton.

At the conference Final Four, the women of Matthews Arena were eliminated by New Hampshire in overtime, 6-5 despite Robinson's three assist effort.

She set up Shelly Looney for the tying goal with four minutes to go, forcing an extra session. But for the second straight season, the Wildcats ended the Huskies' year in the overtime of a semifinal game. Robinson finished the year scoring in seven straight contests.

Northeastern proved it belonged with the best in the area, topping UNH twice in 1992-93 (including once in Durham where UNH had not won since 1989) and later tying the eventual national champions from Providence College, 6-6.

Robinson attended Wilmington High School before arriving on NU's Huntington Avenue. She is part of Northeastern's acclaimed Cooperative Education program and will graduate in 1994.

Softball clinic

There will be a softball clinic for all girls ages eight through 15 Saturday, May 1 starting at 9:30 a.m. at Wilmington Town Park.

Instructions will be given by the Wilmington High School softball varsity and junior varsity players and coaches.

Hockey scholarships

The Tewksbury Youth Hockey Association is accepting applications for the annual college financial aid program. Any graduating senior who has been a member of the Tewksbury Youth Hockey Association for at least four seasons and participated in the program as a Bantam or Midget may apply.

Please forward your letter to T.Y.H.A. Attn. Mr. Harold Bussey, P.O. Box 604, Tewksury, Ma. 01876, by April 30, 1993. Applications will be considered at the May meeting.

Orr returns to The Games

Hockey legend Bobby Orr is a hit with members of the 1992 Bay State Games Northeast Region baseball team. Orr was participating in last year's Bay State Summer Games as honorary coach and spokesperson for BayBank, the presenting sponsor. The NHL Hall of Famer will once again serve as honorary coach of the Games this year. The 1993 Games are expected to attract more than 12,000 athletes from all over Massachusetts who will compete in tryouts and regional events from May through mid-July. The finals events will take place in Boston July 15-18.

Bay State Games Scholarships

The Bay State Games has announced the return of the New England Telephone Scholarship program. Over the past five years, New England Telephone has awarded $50,000 in scholarships to Bay State Games participants.

This year, New England Telephone will award six $2,000 "Future Leaders" Scholarships to high school juniors who have demonstrated leadership and exceptional commitment to education and athletics. Two winners will be selected from each of the three Massachusetts area codes: 617, 508, 413.

Applicants must be juniors at a Massachusetts secondary school and compete in the 1993 Bay State Summer/Winter Games. Winners of the 1993 "Future Leaders" Scholarship will be recognized at the opening ceremonies for this summer's games on Thursday, July 15 at City Hall Plaza.

Applications are available at all high school guidance depart- ments, high school athletic departments, and town libraries. They may also be requested at: Bay State Games, PO Box 8336, Boston, MA 02114 or by calling (617) 727-3227.

Mother Nature's Pantry

by Bill Conlon

Mother Nature's pantry is offering some pretty yummy things for free right now.

Two spring shoots are popping up right now that are terrific eating and free for the taking -- asparagus and fiddleheads. There is a lot more that is edible out there, but they are the sort of things you'd only see Rambo eating, for the most part.

Asparagus you've seen. The wild version growing throughout North America looks just like the vegetable you buy in stores, only smaller. You need to cultivate asparagus to get the big, thick stalks you find in stores. In the wild, survival is harder than on a farm, so the wild shoots will be correspondingly smaller.

Asparagus grows in damp places with rich soils, so search along the borders of swamps and marshlands. The shoots will be arrow-straight and sticking out of the ground about six to ten inches tall. Snip them off just above ground level, and keep on looking. Once the root system for asparagus is established, it spreads. Nipping off the shoots won't hurt, because the shoots will grow back. But don't press your luck too far, by nipping, waiting and nipping again, because the plant might give up.

Most wild asparagus patches aren't very big, although you might bump into a treasure trove. Veteran wild asparagus chasers will never, ever reveal their best hunting spots, since the plant sprouts up year after year, and they like going back to the same spots for the annual spring harvest.

Good luck, and good eating.

Next on the list is that ancient New England favorite -- Fiddleheads.

These little gems are the sprouts of common woodland ferns, although some ferns taste better than others. A good rule of thumb is that fuzzy fiddles don't taste as good as smooth ones, but you'll learn with practice. Fiddleheads get their name from the tip of the sprout, which looks like the top of a violin -- all curled up in a flat spiral. If the top has uncurled, the fiddlehead is past its prime and should be passed up.

If you find one fiddlehead, you've found an acre or two worth of them. Ferns reproduce with spores, and a single plant can generate hundreds or thousands of tiny spores. Spores grow on the underside of the mature leaves.

Fiddleheads should be boiled, then discard the water and reheat in fresh boiling water. I prefer them with melted butter, but that's a matter of taste. Munch one just to be sure you picked the right breed, then watch the faces of your guests when they see "Weeds?" on the table.

Fresh fiddleheads and asparagus in the springtime. Ahh! More sensible, healthy, free food brought to you by Mother Earth. Enjoy!

Big catch

Wilmington youngster Darin Young caught this 23 pound carp Friday, April 23 at Silver Lake. Here Darin celebrates and proudly displays his early season catch.

Cheerleading camp July 16-18

Pat Shea Thompson, former New England Patriots Cheerleader Captain, Dartmouth High School Cheerleading Coach/Teacher and Director of NE Cheering Day and Resident Camps, has announced that applications are now being accepted for the 1993 session to be held at Endicott College in Beverly Farms.

The dates are Friday through Sunday July 16-18, 1993. The program is designed for girls in grades five through 12 who are interested in improving their total cheering skills.

Individuals as well as group instruction will be given by a top notch experienced group of coaches that boasts the top camper/staff ratio in New England. This is a great experience for cheerleaders at all age levels, either as individuals or as a squad.

For an application and/or additional information, call (508) 388-0589 or (508) 996-6232 or write NECI, Post Office Box 837, Amesbury, MA 01913.

Quarterback/receiver camp July 9-11

Applications are now being accepted for the 1993 Day and Resident Quarterback/Receiver sessions to be held at Governor Dummer Academy in Byfield. The dates are Friday through Sunday, July 9-11, 1993.

Quarterbacks and receivers are two of the most skilled positions in the game and they demand a great deal of discipline and repetition in perfecting the skills and techniques necessary to perform at these positions.

Fall team practice can not devote the individualized attention and concentration in these two areas of passing and receiving.

In short, the outstanding professional, college and high school staff will compliment and supplement your fall coaching.

For an application and/or additional information, call (508) 388-0589 or write NECI, P.O. Box 837, Amesbury, MA 01913.

Field hockey camp July 25-29

Wendy Anderson, head coach of Brown University, former Ivy League champions and Director of NE Field Hockey Day and Resident Camp, has announced that applications are now being accepted for the 1993 session to be held at Governor Dummer Academy, Byfield, MA.

The dates are Sunday through Thursday July 25-29, 1993. This outstanding camp is designed to meet the needs of beginner-advanced field hockey players in grades five through 12.

Every girl will be given individual instruction, with a stress on fundamentals in eight to one camper/staff ratio.

Emphasis will be placed on individual skills and stick work, offensive/defensive techniques, coached six a side games and regulation indoor and outdoor tourney play.

For an application and/or more information, call (508) 388-0589 or write: NECI, Post Box 837, Amesbury, MA 01913.

Lisa leaps to top

Lisa Crowley of Wilmington has qualified for the Level 10 Regional Gymnastic Championships to be held at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. At the State Meet, which was held in Northboro, Lisa was one of only two Level 10 girls in the junior division at States. After two days of competing, both compulsory and optional routines, both juniors tied for first place with a 70.75 all-around score.

Gymnastic exhibition Friday night

Northeast Gymnastics Center, 14 Jewel Drive, Wilmington will present a gymnastics exhibition Friday, April 30 from 6:30 until 8:30 p.m. including some of the best performers in the state. A raffle and a bake sale will also be held at that time.

The public is invited and admission is free. Call 508-988-0678 for more information.

Pop Warner scholarship

Wilmington Pop Warner is offering two scholarships to past players and cheerleaders. If you are going on to higher education at an accredited school, please see your guidance counselor or contact Wilmington Pop Warner at Wilmington Pop Warner, 668 Main St., Suite 303, Wilmington, MA. 01887.

Letter to the sports editor

Engdahl thanks those who helped

Dear Rick:

My thanks to all of you in Wilmington who supported me in running the Boston Marathon on behalf of the Leukemia Society of America. Your generous contributions made it a victory for the Leukemia Society and myself.

The Leukemia Society goal was $750. per runner. Your generous donations went over $5000.

My sincerest gratitude,
John A. Engdahl

Kipnes directs summer camp

The 12th annual North Reading Basketball Camp will be held at North Reading High School from July 26-30.

The camp is for boys entering grades five through 10. Directing the camp will again be North Reading High School basketball coach Barry Kipnes.

The camp day will run from 9 to 3:30. Heavy emphasis will eplaced on fundamentals and all areas of individual play will be covered.

The program of instruction includes station drills, instructional video tapes and individual improvement drills.

Extra attention will be devoted to shooting instruction. Campers will play two games every day, with each camper playing an equal amount of time.

In the past 11 years, campers have attended from over 25 communities. The camp enrollment has been completely filled the last two years.

Beside the program of instruction, each camper receives a camp t-shirt, a certificate of attendance and a coach's evaluaiton with recommendations and suggestions for improvement.

Each camper will also receive a 24 page booklet entitled "Skills and Drills: The Fundamentals of Basketball and Much More." This booklet, written by Barry Kipnes, covers all individual basketball skills and describes drills a youngster can do alone to improve his level of play. Over 18,000 copies of "Skills and Drills" have been sold throughout the United States.

For more information and a camp brochure, please call 617-593-7072 or write to Barry Kipnes, 26 Kingwood Lane, Lynn, MA 01905.

Athletic scholarships

Over 100,000 collegiate athletic scholarships are available each year to male and female high school and junior college student athletes.

Contrary to popular belief, students don't have to be all-state to qualify. Much of this money goes unused. A new publication with forms, sample letters and tables of factual information is available for student-athletes.

It takes them step by step through the important process of getting an athletic scholarship and includes college and conference listings.

For information on how to get a collegiate athletic scholarship, send a #10 self addressed, stamped envelope to the National Sports Foundation, 611A Willow Drive, P.O. Box 940, Oakhurst, NJ 07755.

Sports deadline

The Town Crier sports deadline is Monday night at 6 p.m. Any copy received after that deadline will not be included in that week's sports section.

Dance training

Lowell General Hospital and National Dance Exercise Instructors Training Association (NDEITA) are co-sponsoring an outstanding public training event on June 5 at Lowell General Hospital, 295 Varnum Ave., Lowell.

Potential and current aerobic instructors will learn exercise science, basic nutrition, injury prevention, low impact/high intensity aerobics in a one day workshop. The workshop includes a complete review, written exam, comprehensive manual, NDEITA certificate and more. Teaching experience is not necessary. Space is limited. For registration information, call 1-800-AEROBIC.

WILMINGTON

The May 4, 1983 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Frank Tuttle of Carson Avenue built a perpetual calendar (slide rule) with which he immediately answered Larz' question "on what day of the week did Dr. Hiller die following a fall from his carriage on November 13, 1888?" With very little effort Frank answered "November 13, 1888 was a Monday."

With over $30,000,000 worth of Wang equipment already in use, G.E. purchased $20,000,000 in office equipment from Wang in Tewksbury which was scheduled for delivery over the next 12 months. This was reportedly the largest commercial order in the history of Wang.

Barbara Stratton of Ring Avenue was pictured as she took part in "Health Works" which was well attended at the Regional Health Center.

Judy Landrigan of Grace Drive and Charles Atamian of Hathaway Road, members of WHS Jazz concert and marching bands have been accepted as members of the ULowell Preparatory Division Honors Wind Ensemble.

WHS senior Cheryl Branscombe was pictured as she unleashed her winning throw in the discus during an MVC track victory over Methuen. Cheryl was a double winner, also taking a first in the shot put.

25 years ago

The May 2, 1968 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

James Donahue of Cypress Street and Katherine Leverone of Glen Road were elected to the Town Democratic Committee.

Madelyn McKie, chairman of the planning board, Ralph Work and Everett Francis, soil scientists and Town Manager Sterling Morris were pictured discussing soil conservation.

Henry Porter retired as post master and was pictured leaving the US Post Office after 30 years of service.

Hyman Jacobs of Clark Street was pictured with a 24 inch, four pound pickerel he caught in the old gravel pit near Ainsworth Road.

Participants in the burning of the mortgage for the Wesley House of the United Methodist Church were pictured, among them: the Rev. Willis Miller, pastor; Lester White, chairman of the commission on education; Russell Joseph, chairman of the board of trustees; Charles Mather, chairman of the building fund, and the Rev. Terry Clay Thomson, former pastor.

Wilson Rice of Linda Road, a senior at WHS was accepted for admission to Wentworth Institute in Boston.

The old barn and carriage house of the Fred Roberts estate burned down, dating to about 1910, the building was, for all intents and purposes, a total loss.

Hicks Employment Service of Wakefield listed opportunities: night shift inventory clerical, $2.26 per hour; order fillers, $2.21 per hour; executive secretary, $2.40 per hour; male machine operators and shippers with license, $100 per week.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage given by David J. Spatola and Darlene A. Spatola to First Eastern Mortgage Corporation said mortgage dated February 12, 1988 and recorded with the North Middlesex Registry of Deeds in Book 4410, Page 320 of which mortgage the undersigned, Lomas Mortgage USA, Inc., is the present holder, for breach of conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same will be sold at Public Auction at 11:00 A.M. on Tuesday the 11th day of May, A.D., 1993, upon the mortgaged premises at Unit 32, Building 2 of the Pheasant Hunt Condominium, 32 Randolph Drive, Tewksbury, Massachusetts, all and singular the premises described in said mortgage, TO WIT:

The dwelling Unit in Tewksbury, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, known as Unit No. 32 in Building No. 2 of the Pheasant Hunt Condominiums located on North Street in said Tewksbury, and created by the Grantor pursuant to Chapter 183A of the Massachusetts General Laws by a Master Deed dated March 3, 1986, and recorded with Middlesex North District Registry of Deeds on March 10, 1986 in Book 3381 Page 0004.

Said Unit is conveyed with a .0415 undivided percentage interest in the Common Areas and Facilities as set forth in said Master Deed which percentage may change in the event additional phase(s) are added to the Condominium under Clause 2 (j) of the Master Deed. Said Unit contains 1008.5 square feet, more or less, as shown on the plans filed with said Master Deed and on the copy of a portion of said plans recorded with MNDRD Book 3425 Page 131, and to which is affixed the verified statement in the form required by Section 9 of Chapter 183A.

This conveyance is made subject to and with the benefit of existing easements and restrictions of record and easements for pipes, wires, ducts, flues, cables, conduits, public utility line and other common elements, all other provisions of the Master Deed, By-Laws, and Floor Plans of the Condominium recorded with said Registry, or as later amended of record, and all provisions of Chapter 183A.

This conveyance is further subject to a Condominium Phasing Amendment dated March 3, 1986 and recorded in said Registry at Book 3381, Page 52.

Said Unit is to be used only for residential purposes.

For Grantor's title see deed of Louise M. Beaulieu, et al, to be recorded herewith.

Said premises will be sold subject to any and all restrictions, easements, improvements, covenants, outstanding tax titles, municipal or other public taxes, assessments, liens, or claims in the nature of liens, and existing encumbrances of record created prior to the mortgage, if any there be.

Said premises will also be sold subject to all leases and tenancies having priority over said mortgage, to tenancies or occupation by persons on the premises now and at the time of said action which tenancies or occupation are subject to said mortgage, to rights or claims in personal property installed by tenants or former tenants now located on the premises, and also to all laws and ordinances including, but not limited to, all building and zoning laws and ordinances.

TERMS OF SALE:

The highest bidder shall be required to deposit cash, bank treasurer's check, or certified check in the amount of TEN THOUSAND ($10,000) DOLLARS at the time and place of sale. The balance of the purchase price shall be paid within thirty (30) days thereafter to the Mortgagee's Attorney, SUZANNE BRUNELLE, PORTNOY & GREENE, P.C., 113 Union Wharf, Boston, Massachusetts and the deed to be transferred upon receipt of the balance of the purchase price. The successful bidder at the sale of the premises shall be required to sign a Memorandum of Terms of Sale containing the above terms at the auction sale. The premises shall be conveyed by the usual foreclosure deed under the statutory power of sale, subject to the foregoing, and in addition, subject to any and all unpaid taxes, tax title, tax liens, water and sewer rates and any other municipal assessments or liens.

The Mortgagee reserves the right to postpone the sale to a later date by public proclamation at the time and date appointed for the sale and to further postpone at any adjourned sale date by public proclamation at the time and date appointed for the adjourned sale date.

Other terms to be announced at the time and place of said sale.

MASSACHUSETTS SMALL CITIES PROGRAM FY '92 EARLY PUBLIC NOTICE FLOODPLAIN & WETLAND

The Town of Wilmington will undertake a Small Cities Program, by means of a grant from the Massachusetts Executive Office of Communities and Development, utilizing funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The program includes a Housing Rehabilitation component largely within the target area in the vicinity of Silver Lake.

Direct financial assistance to low and moderate residents within the target area will total $326,750, with an estimated twenty-five (25) units to receive aid in the moderate rehabilitation category and three (3) under substantial rehabilitation. An estimated six (6) to eight (8) structures appear to be situated in or abutting the 100 year flood Zone A along the Silver Lake/Lubbers Brook flood plain. An estimated six (6) to eight (8) structures (some of which are the same as ones that are potentially within the flood plain around Silver Lake) appear to be located within 100' of wetlands under MGL Chapter 131.

The Town of Wilmington is interested in soliciting any comments from the public in regard to possible impacts that could result from the project. Please send written comments to the Environmental Certification Officer for this program, Ms. Lynn G. Duncan, Planning and Conservation Department, Wilmington Town Hall, 121 Glen Road, Wilmington, MA 01887. Comments must be received no later than May 14, 1993.

Meehan open house this weekend

Area residents will have an opportunity to meet their congressman when U.S. Rep. Martin T. Meehan hosts an open house at his Lowell office this weekend.

The event is set for Saturday, May 1, from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. in the third floor of the Howe Building, 11 Kearney Square in downtown Lowell. The office serves the city of Lowell and the towns of Carlisle, Chelmsford, Billerica, Dracut, Dunstable, Groton, Pepperell, Tewksbury, Tyngsboro and Westford.

Meehan has district offices in the three cities of the Fifth Congressional District - Lawrence, Lowell and Marlborough. He located his main office in Lowell because it is easily accessible and is the largest community in the district.

Backman joins Carlson RE

Long time Wilmington resident Anita Backman is now working full time for Carlson Real Estate in Tewksbury after completing an extensive three week training course.

Backman attended the University of Mass at Amherst as a history major and art minor. She served on the Wilmington Finance Committee for 14 years and the Wilmington Community Fund for 15 years. She is presently an associate member of the board of appeals and the recording secretary for the Wilmington Family Counseling Service.

Korean War Memorial

No longer forgotten

By KEN MAGUIRE

Ask war veterans what they want from their country and the wide range of answers will probably boil down to one common denominator: "Don't forget our bloodshed and sacrifice."

So far, the United States has done a decent job of honoring its veterans and not forgetting their sacrifices. Various war monuments are proof of that.

Naturally, World War II will never be forgotten, nor its soldiers. Veterans of a politically hairy Vietnam War were remembered, albeit not in a timely fashion, by way of The Wall.

And most recently, veterans of a virtually bloodless, three-month-long Gulf War were honored with a ticker-tape parade through Manhattan. Somewhere along the line was a forgotten war with forgotten vets - the Korean War.

Korean War veterans fought just as hard as other vets and gave their hearts and souls to their country. In almost 10 years of fighting in Vietnam, 57,685 Americans died. In three years, nearly the same amount, 54,246, died in Korea. Of that amount there were 1,620 from Massachusetts. But until now, few people knew it.

That will change on July 27, at 10 a.m., the 40th anniversary of the armistice signing that ended the Korean War. On that date, a Korean War Veterans Memorial will officially be unveiled in the Charlestown Navy Yard, leaving a permanent reminder of the Massachusetts residents who gave the supreme sacrifice, their lives.

"There was a war in Korea and it shouldn't be forgotten," said Korean War vet and Wakefield resident Joseph P. McCallion, who is also the public relations director for the Massachusetts Korean War Veterans Committee. "We just want to make sure that when we're gone, we'll be remembered."

The memorial will depict a nine-foot high American soldier in winter gear, standing alone with his rifle, peering into the night. For the past year, sculptor Robert Shure, of Skylight Studios in Woburn, has been working on a clay model that will be bronzed for the July 27 dedication. The Veterans Committee told them what the statue should look like.

"It's supposed to depict a soldier alone at night on sentry duty, with a forgotten look in his eyes," Shure said. "To get that look in his eyes to be forgotten was the most difficult part. It's a matter of trial and error."

Surrounding the soldier will be a hexagonal structure, forty-four feet in diameter with walkways and benches. Six twelve-foot high columns will be spanned by five lintels on top. On the inside of each column, facing the soldier, the names of the Massachusetts residents who died in Korea will be inscribed on bronze plaques.

Inscribed on the outside of the front two lintels will be the seals of the U.S. and of Massachusetts. The names of the major battles fought in Korea will be inscribed on the inside facing of each lintel.

Currently being prepared for the dedication is an 18-inch thick piece of granite from Korean soil, donated by the Republic of South Korean. The granite is more than just a foundation.

"It shows a bond between the U.S. and Korea," McCallion said. "It shows that we're inseparable. We were committed to not letting South Korea be taken over by communists."

That bond is as strong as it ever was. In raising money for the monument, which has a final cost of $350,000, the Korean community was responsive. One Korean man, who fought in the war, personally donated $5,000,

Adult Wellness Service in Melrose on May 13th

Think spring and think wellness: Melrose Visiting Nurse Service will hold its next Adult Wellness Service on May 13, a Thursday, at the First Baptist Church in Melrose.

For $1 per adult, persons can get their blood pressure read and recorded, an overall health review, and the opportunity to ask health-related questions of MVNS registered nurses. The service focuses on health in terms of wellness - how comfortably people can perform certain activities of daily living, as well as how they feel. The Adult Wellness Service at the First Baptist Church, held in conjunction with the Melrose Council on Aging, will continue to focus on the needs and concerns of older people, but all adults are welcome to come for a "wellness checkup."

Melrose Visiting Nurse Service will also offer this new service at other locations in the city, to both the general public and to groups, organizations and churchs that request it for their members.

For an appointment for the may 13 Adult Wellness Service, call the Melrose Council on Aging Senior Drop-In Center (617-662-6886).

If an organization or church would like to offer an Adult Wellness Service to members, call the Melrose Visiting Nurse Service (617) 665-4800).

MVNS also makes "house calls" to residents of Melrose and surrounding communities who need health care at home. Its staff of registered nurses, physical, occupational and speech therapists, certified home health aides, social workers and a nutritionist continue to provide home care, as the agency has for almost 70 years.

And, in addition to its wellness service for adults, MVNS offers a health service for children: monthly checkups and immunizations for a nominal fee for well children newborn through age 5.

For more information about the Melrose Visiting Nurse Service or its adult or child wellness services, call the MVNS office at (617) 665-4800.

Women's Health Series at Malden Hospital in May

The Malden Hospital celebrates May, Spring's finest month, with a special series of women's health programs. Designed to address some of women's most pressing health concerns, the Women's Health Series includes a range of topics presented by female health professionals for women of all ages and stages of life, from daughters to senior citizens.

The series kicks off on Tuesday, May 4th at 7 p.m., with a lecture on "Osteoporosis" in The Malden Hospital Auditorium. Dr. Gayle Orczyk will discuss what can be done to prevent osteoporosis, osteoporosis as a factor in menopause, signs and symptoms, the role of nutrition and exercise in preventing or coping with osteoporosis, and the relevance of family history.

On Wednesday, May 5th at 7 p.m., Dr. Jeanne Arnold, Director of The Malden Hospital's Family Practice Residency Program, will present a lecture entitled "Domestic Violence - How to Recognize, How to Help." Dr. Arnold , a nationally known authority and counselor on the subject, will discuss the pervasiveness of what is emerging as a health issue of crisis proportions. In addition to discussing the various forms of domestic violence, including emotional, sexual, and physical abuse of children, Dr. Arnold will discuss the victim's experience, including signs and symptoms of a problem, and offer insight and guidance as to ways concerned family and friends may help.

The series continues with lectures on "Self Esteem for Women, Mothers and Daughters," on May 13th, "Breast Cancer" on May 20th, and Birthing Alternatives on May 26th.

All of the women's health lectures are free and open to the public. To register for any of the programs, please call (617) 397-6000.

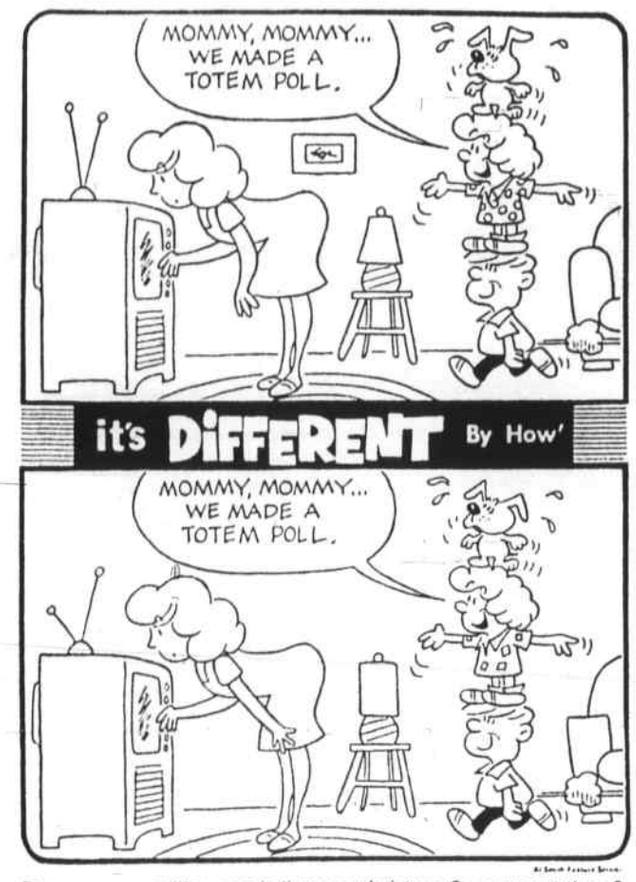

The Women's Health Series is presented as part of Health Matters, The Malden Hospital's program of free and low community health education programs. For more information on Health Matters, or to receive a free copy of the Health Matters program listing please call (617) 397-6000.

About the Towns

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

"About The Towns" covers recent events in the 13-town Middlesex East area. Because Middlesex East deadlines are early, please check the front sections of this paper for up-to-date information about your city or town. We also welcome original material - please send it to Phyllis Nissen, "About The Towns," Middlesex East Supplement, Box 240, Reading, MA 01867.

BURLINGTON PREPARES FOR COMING ATTRACTIONS - The Burlington Board of Selectmen has recommended General Cinema's proposal that a 10-theater cinema complex be located on South Avenue at the corner of Middlesex Turnpike on land previously owned by Wang and the Tambone Corporation.

The nine-acre, two-section site has room for 647 parking spaces. The theater itself would seat 2,400.

If the plan meets Planning Board approval on May 6th, construction could begin this summer with showtime expected in about a year.

FOLLY BECOMES WINCHESTER TRADITION ... "follies," actually.

As part of an intergenerational effort to raise funds for the Winchester Youth Center, the "Ageless Follies" will be presented on Saturday, May 1st at 7:30 p.m. in the Winchester Town Hall.

The "no talent" show will include performers of all ages, creative commercials for local businesses, and flashes of romantic wide screen pictures of seniors in their younger days.

For information on tickets - tables or chairs available - check with Jenks Senior Center. Last year's event was a sell-out.

WOBURN AWAITS MAY 4TH ... the day when voters decide the future of the schools, and Mayor Rabbitt announces the future of the state of the city.

On the 4th, voters will decide on a Proposition 2.5 override which would allow the appropriation of an additional $600,000 for the schools in fiscal 1994. And Mayor John Rabbitt will announce whether he will be a candidate for a sixth consecutive term as mayor.

The override results will be known at 9:00 p.m. or so. The Rabbitt run - or not - will be revealed at 2:00 p.m.

SEAL YOUR WALLET, NOT YOUR DRIVEWAY - With the advent of warmer weather, the driveway sealing flim flam man has surfaced, this time in Wakefield where one spring scam involved four men, $1400, a preference for cash, and a lousy job.

Wakefield Police Lt. John Mackay warns that any transaction - especially door-to-door - over $25 should allow for a two-day withdrawal period.

Last year's area con artwork involved chimneys.

MALDEN VOTES TO OPEN 24 HOURS - The Malden City Council has unanimously voted to allow the new Stop & Shop to operate 24 hours a day with the stipulation that the Malden Police chief has the final word on whether or not a police detail is needed.

The council had previously denied a 24-hour permit to a restaurant because of its residential location and was expected to allow the new Star Market to also open 24 hours a day.

No longer forgotten

used for the purchase of a state flag.

The Massachusetts Korean community as a whole also donated $5,000. They bought the Republic of Korea flag that will fly above the monument. Alongside the Massachusetts and Korean flags will fly an American and United Nations flag, both of which came by way of $5,000 donations, one from American Legion, the other from the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW).

The Commonwealth has also been generous. In addition to donating the land, which is considered prime real estate, the state has funded half the $350,000. To date, the Veterans Committee is $35,000 short, however, it expects everything to flow smoothly on July 27.

Circling the monument will be a "Memorial Brick Walkway." The bricks comprising the walkway are being sold as another way to raise funds. For $250, two bricks will be prepared.

The purchaser of the bricks, be it individual, city, town, organization, or corporation, can have a brief message inscribed into them. The inscriptions will be identical. One brick is used in the walkway while the other is stored in case the first one cracks at some point in the future.

The Veterans Committee notified every city and town in the state, expecting a good response. What it got was a feeling that the Korean War and its veterans are still forgotten. To date, only 24 of the 351 communities in the state have bought bricks.

"It ticks me off," McCallion said. "Our biggest disappointment in the whole thing is that the cities and towns were crying that they can't afford $250 to honor their dead with a simple brick. Money appears to be the overriding factor, not the service of people who gave their lives."

The cities and towns are not the only ones watching the vault, McCallion added. "Corporations in this state, other than Raytheon, have been unresponsive. Corporate businesses have done about zero."

Veterans groups, on the other hand have been more accommodating. Groups such as the VFW and the American Legion "have been very good because they understand," McCallion explains. He also said the generosity of regular citizens has been a help as well.

In Korea for 16 months as part of the U.S. Army's EZ Company 27th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, McCallion said serving his country was nothing out of the ordinary. He did his time like anyone else, then came home.

It wasn't until a few years ago that he realized there was no remembrance of the war. He attended an informal veterans gathering at the state house in 1985. While there, he met for the first time a New York resident named Bill Norris, who was in his Division in Korea.

At the meeting, Norris told McCallion that his daughter had gone to the library one day to pick out a book on the Korean War. She could not find one.

The pair became the first two members of the Veterans Committee. At that point it had 39 members. Today, it has grown to 11,000, of which 300 are from Massachusetts.

On the national level, a Korean War Veterans Memorial in Washington D.C. is scheduled to be unveiled July 27, 1995. Groundbreaking ceremonies took place in June of 1992. It will be located near the Lincoln Circle, just south of the Reflecting Pool. The memorial will depict two columns of soldiers advancing up a slope, with the wind at their backs.

The image of the Korean War may be slowly changing, as more people are recognizing the efforts of these veterans, and they are finally being rightfully honored. McCallion, however, said the accomplishments come in spite of the work of the Select Committee on POW/MIA's, co-chaired by Massachusetts Senator John Kerry.

The Select Committee, which completed its studies last fall, was charged with examining the status of POW/MIAs in WWII, Korea and Vietnam. It concentrated mostly on the Vietnam War, and largely overlooked Korea, says McCallion. Records show that he may be right. In its 18 months of existence, public discussions on the Korean War took place inside one week.

"There's a lot to be looked into as far as the Korean war goes, and Sen. Kerry has failed to do that," McCallion said. "The Korean vets are very disappointed with Sen. Kerry."

Recovering remains of American soldiers deemed POW or MIA is the focus of McCallion's concern. According to figures supplied by the Secretary of Defense, there are 8,177 Americans unaccounted for, including 389 who were POWs. There are 105 Massachusetts residents still unaccounted for.

McCallion, who was born in Woburn and worked at Raytheon for 25 years, says his committee will keep plugging away and will be ready for the July 27 dedication.

He'll sleep easier knowing that Korean War veterans will always be remembered.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY BRINGS BACK MEMORIES

The Malden Historical Society will bring back memories of Old Suffolk Square on Tuesday, May 4 at 8 p.m. at the Malden Public Library, Ryder Gallery, 36 Salem St., Malden.

Join local historian Bill Mini as his slide lecture recalls the people, places and sights of Suffolk Square. Taken for urban renewal in the 1960's, this vibrant neighborhood was home to a large Jewish population. Closely knit, yet sometimes rough at the edges, this neighborhood was always interesting.

The Society's Annual meeting and election of officers precedes the program which is free. New members are always welcome. Call (617) 324-0218 with questions.

CAMP FIRE BOYS FLY FISHING RETREAT

On the weekend of May 7-9, the Camp Fire Council for Eastern Massachusetts will hold a Berkshire Spring Fly Fishing Primer at their summer resident camp in East Otis, MA. A unique collaboration with local Trout Unlimited and Federation of Fly Fishers anglers, the event will feature casting workshops, fly tying instruction, and guided excursions along trout and panfish waters in the southern Berkshire region.

Clinics will be available for anglers of all ages and abilities, and a special group of instructors will be on hand just for first-timers and youth participants. Casting clinics will take place on Camp Nawaka's beautiful 20-acre private lake. Participants will enjoy the unique, rustic accommodations of Camp Nawaka and will have plenty of time for spring wildflower hikes, tennis, and other recreational activities. For more information, please call Matthew Young at (617) 523-6006.

ROAD RACE HELPS RETARDED CITIZENS

The Charles River Run will be held on May 16 at 11 a.m. at Daley Field on Nonantum Road in Brighton. The run is a seven-mile loop along the Charles River.

Registration is $10 before May 5th. There will be T-shirts, trophies and cash awards. The proceeds will benefit Greater Boston Association for Retarded Citizens. Contact Bill Perry at (617) 266-4250 with questions.

Macintosh Courses: Introduction to the Macintosh, Introduction to PageMaker and Advanced PageMaker.

For reservations or for more information, contact Doug Kimball at (508) 774-8565.

LMH TO HOLD FREE COMMUNITY LECTURE

Knowing what to do in a medical emergency could mean the difference between life and death and is something everyone should be taught. In celebration of National Emergency Medical Services Week, Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford will be holding a free community lecture on "First Aid: What you know could save a life" on Thursday, May 6 from 7 to 8 p.m. in the LMH School of Nursing.

LMH emergency medicine physicians and nurses will explain how anyone can recognize and respond to potentially life-threatening situations, such as: chest pain/angina; bites and stings; allergic reactions; heart attacks; poisoning; and heat stroke.

In addition, items that should be included in a home first aid kit will be reviewed. A fully-stocked first aid kit worth $40 will be raffled at the lecture.

Reservations are required for this free lecture and space is limited. To register, please call the LMH Community Relations Office at (617) 396-9250, Ext. 1633.

Sha-Na-Na comes to Ovations

Sha Na Na, celebrating its 25th anniversary in show business in 1993, brings its unique brand of rock and roll to Ovations at the Holiday Inn in Peabody, Saturday, May 1 for two shows at 7:30 and 10:30 p.m.

Over the past three decades, Sha Na Na has traveled the world performing musical stories of boy meets girl, lost love, romance, dancing at the hop, and good clean fun. The nine-member band includes five original members, Screamin' Scott, Jocko, Chico, Donny and Lennie-aka "the round mound of sound" on sax.

Ever since they burst on the entertainment scene as part of Woodstock - and the ensuing film and soundtrack, Sha Na Na have been helping America to party.

As Performance Magazine's Nostalgia Act of the Year, they play everywhere from Las Vegas to corporate affairs, with a stage show that incorporates nearly 200 costumes and props and one of the greatest audience participation events in all of show business - The Greaser Olympics.

Tickets are $15, available at all Ticketmaster outlets, or charge by phone at (617) 931-2000 (in NH 603-626-5000). The Holiday Inn is also offering a Hotel/Show/Breakfast package available at $52 per person (based on dbl occupancy). For more information call (508) 535-4600. The Holiday Inn is located at 1 Newbury Street in Peabody.

Music Theatre's children's programs

North Shore Music Theatre's Theatre For Young Audiences 1993 season opened on April 26 with the first of 12 performances of William Shakespeare's "Macbeth." Since it's founding in 1960, more than 1,600,000 students have been introduced to Shakespeare, original musical adaptations of classic works, and educational concerts through the North Shore Music Theatre's Theatre for Young Audiences program.

North Shore Music Theatre's production of "Macbeth" (through May 7) is recommended for Grades 7-12 and will be directed by Russell Treyz. Treyz is the recipient of a Drama Desk Award for Most Promising Director. His Broadway credits include "Cottonpatch Gospel" which he directed and co-authored with Harry Chapin. Off-Broadway he has worked with Playwrights Horizons, and Musical Theatre Works, among others.

Following "Macbeth," Theatreworks USA will bring "The Secret Garden" (May 10-15) to North Shore Music Theatre. This classic tale of orphan Mary Lennox, includes a rich musical score composed by Kim Oler with lyrics by Alison Hubbard, and is recommended for Grades 3-6. The story of Theatrework's "The Secret Garden" was written by Linda B. Kline and Robert Jess Roth. Kline was twice nominated for an Emmy Award as head writer on ABC-TV's "FYI" starring Hal Linden. She was staff writer for "Captain Kangaroo" and has written several films and plays for young people. Roth is the director and co-author of "The Secret Garden."

Originating in 1961 with one show, "Young Abe Lincoln," Theatreworks now has a repertory of close to 70 plays and musicals. Several noted actors got their professional start with Theatreworks, including Henry Winkler, Tony Award-winning director Jerry Zaks, and Academy Award-winner F. Murray Abraham.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" (May 17-22) is presented by Gingerbread Players and Jack. This production has the distinction of being the longest running children's show to ever play continuously Off-Broadway. "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is recommended for Grades K-4.

The Gingerbread Players and Jack is a professional children's theater company that was established in 1964. They pride themselves in producing shows that not only revive the old familiar tales, but also bring new insights and imagination to the retelling. The accent is always on human relationships and situations that will offer guidelines for children to follow when confronted with the problem of growing up.

"Dinosaur Rock" (May 24-29), suited for Grades K-3, is a product of Dinorock Productions. The six dinosaur puppets have names like Stella Stegosaurus, Dinah Diplodocus, and the Hadrosaur from Hackensack.

For further information on North Shore Music Theatre's Theatre for Young Audiences events call (508) 922-8500 or visit the Box Office at 62 Dunham Road, Beverly, (Exit 19 off Rte 128N).

Things to Do

Mystery Dinner Theatre comes to Woburn

"Jilted By Justice," a Murder Mystery Dinner, will be presented by the Family Day Care program of the Woburn Council of Social Concern on Friday, May 7, at 7 p.m. at the Crest View Plaza in Woburn.

Actors from Haley Productions will "solve" the mystery, with help from the audience. Proceeds of the event will fund enrichment activities for children in the Family Day Care program.

"We invite everyone to enjoy a wonderful night out as we raise funds to enrich children's lives," said Beverly Prifti, a member of Social Concern's Board of Directors and a Family Day Care provider.

The enrichment programs will connect young children with educational and cultural experiences through special presentations and field trips to museums, zoos, and musical performances.

Tickets to the dinner and mystery theatre are $30, and are available from Social Concern by calling (617) 935-6495.

The Family Day Care program is a network of family day care licensed homes, which provide day care to approximately 80 young children throughout this region, most of whom are from low income families and families in crisis.

ANTHONY MANCONI

I love the music of Italian operas. The plots or stories of most of them are the same. Like "Torredo" comes home to "Unwind" after an "Eight Hour" shift as a "Watchman" in a "Clock" factory. The "Minute" he comes home, he is "Alarmed" to discover that his wife "Santuzza" has been "Two Timing" him. The situation is "Crystal" clear, so Torredo "Springs" into "Action." He goes to center stage and sings, "It's later than you think." She replies, "I don't know who 'Wound' you up but it's 'Time' for you to 'Buzz" off." Santuzza then waddles over to him and sings, "Although you are old and 'Run-Down" I love you just the same." And so Folks, ends another beautiful Italian opera.

Winston Churchill was a great speaker. He once said, "I know great crowds come to hear me speak but, if, instead of making a political speech, I was being 'hanged' the crowd would be twice as big."...Joe Altavesta asked me, "Chipper, how's your wife, Kathy, doing with her bowling?" I smiled and replied, "A heck of a lot better than her golf, she hasn't lost a ball yet."

I walked into a local diner and told the waitress, "Bring me a ham sandwich and step on it!" Two minutes later she brought me a sandwich that looked like it was hit by a Mack Truck. "What the heck is this mess?" I shouted. "Look here," she exclaimed, "you told me to bring you a ham sandwich and to step on it didn't you?"

I asked an old maid cousin, Donna Shea, why she never married? She poked me in the ribs and said, "Look here, four eyes, I have a dog that snarls, a parrot that swears, a chimney that smokes and a cat that stays out all night. I guess I never needed a husband and besides, cousin Chipper, mind your own "bee's wax!"

A missionary in a very poor section of Peru seeing a boy with one shoe asked, "How did you lose the other shoe lad?" "I didn't," he replied, "I found this one."...Times are tough for blue collar workers and also for some members of the professions. A lawyer handed me his card and said, "If you ever need legal advice call this number. It's a candy store and my Uncle Danny will give me the message."

I told Charlie Mullin, my mailman, "Don't be afraid of my dog. I've been feeding him garlic bread and limburger cheese so now his 'bark' is worse than his 'bite."...I hate to paint with a ladder. I'm afraid of heights. I believe in "terra firma" - the more "firma" the less "terror."

My nephew, Dennis Tully, asked his grandfather, "Were you on Noah's Ark?" "Of course not, why the heck do you ask?" "Well," Dennis replied, "if you weren't on the Ark, how come you didn't get drowned?"...Good Grief! my Aunt Nora's hair has turned prematurely Orange!... Jack Kennedy shook the hand of a coal miner in West Virginia when he was campaigning for president. The miner asked, "Is it true that you are a millionaire's son and haven't worked a day in your life?" Jack Kennedy smiled and said, "Yes, that's true." "Well, let me tell you something young man," the miner exclaimed, "You haven't missed a darn thing!"

For the best choice in Equity Creditline rates, stop here...

Everywhere you look, banks are touting low Home Equity Creditline rates. But unlike those ordinary banks, Andover Bank offers a choice of three low rate programs. And as far as we know, only Andover Bank offers you low rates, a choice of three programs, and charges no closing costs and no annoying annual fees!

Apply for an Andover Bank Equity Creditline by June 30, 1993, and you can choose a program that's exactly right for you.

Choice 1: Andover PrimeNow – If your needs are immediate, look to our PrimeNow Equity Creditline. Pay only the prime rate until 6/30/94. Then your rate becomes only 1 1/2% above the prime.

Andover PrimeNow
6.0% Rate 7.5% APR

7.0% Rate 7.0% APR
Andover Prime+One

Choice 2: Andover Prime+One – For long-term thinkers, our Prime+One Equity Creditline guarantees that rate for the life of your loan – a rate so low it could save you thousands in interest.

Choice 3: Andover PrimeLife – For homeowners who have no first mortgage or who are looking to pay off their first mortgage, our PrimeLife Equity Creditline guarantees the prime rate for the entire life of the loan.

To learn more about our Equity Creditline limited time offer, mail this coupon or call our Consumer Loan Department without delay. With your choice of three low rate programs and no fees, we're sure you'll agree that at Andover Bank, you're the most important customer we'll ever have.

Prime Rate (as published in the Wall Street Journal) adjusted monthly on the last business day of the month, with an 18% lifetime cap. Credit advances are available for ten years. Current Andover Bank customers must qualify for an additional $20,000 to existing Creditline to qualify for these rate programs.

Then send us this coupon.

—"Indian Summer"—Short Takes

"Indian Summer" Starring Alan Arkin, Matt Craven, Diane Lane, Bill Paxton, Elizabeth Perkins, Kevin Pollak, Vincent Spano, Julie Warner, Kimberly Williams. Directed and written by Mike Binder. Produced by Jeffrey Silver, Robert Newmyer. Rated PG-13.

As a genre, it's getting stretched pretty thin. Whether you call it Yuppie angst, or merely Grown Up Blues, the holes are starting to show through this plot devise.

John Sayles started it with "The Return of the Secaucus Seven" and Hollywood mainlined it with "The Big Chill." The Brits picked up on the theme with "Peter's Friends" and now the thirtysomething have gone back to camp in the mildly amusing "Indian Summer."

Seven campers, now going through their adult crises, one fiancee and the son of the camp's original maintenance man have joined "Uncle Lou" (Alan Arkin) for a week of fun in the September sun. Lou is planning to shut the camp down - he claims he can no longer relate to the kids. Before shutting down, however, he invites 30 people from the camp's "Golden Age" in the 1970s. Only seven show up. And though Lou never comes right out and says it, he obviously hopes someone will want to take over the camp.

The adult campers fit easily into slots. Kevin Pollak is the nervous workaholic, Bill Paxton the drifter working on his sobriety, Vincent Spano and Julie Warner bring their marital problems with them, Elizabeth Perkins is the cynical career woman who finds herself becoming desperately lonely and Diane Lane is a woman stuck in a rut and too depressed to move on. The least likeable is Matt Craven as a crass, successful businessman who brings along one of his trophies - a 21-year-old "new fiancee." Kimberly Williams is the perky girlfriend with more backbone than Craven, or anyone, expected.

Writer/director Mike Binder actually attended Camp Tamakwa with director Sam Raimi, who plays the comically clumsy maintenance man, Stick. Located in Ontario's Algonquin Provincial Park, the setting makes for a pretty picture. But the movie is bathed in much more than a soft, September light. Dripping with treacly manipulation, both the direction and the script make absolutely certain we will feel good about this movie, whether it deserves it or not.

Though the film is too sticky-sweet to reveal much of an emotional impact, or even much imagination, some of the cast manage to be quite effective. Diane Lane leaves the strongest impression as a woman unable to bury a husband who died a year earlier. Lane's sadness permeates her performance, proving she has developed into a fine actress and worthy of loftier assignments.

For his role of the ruff on the outside/soft on the inside Uncle Lou, Arkin manages to sidestep much of the film's mawkishness. He expects his campers to behave themselves and participate in camp activities, treating his guests much as he did 20 years earlier. It's a stagy ploy, but because Arkin plays the part with deadpan humor, it works for him.

As for the movie, it leaves you feeling as if you just skimmed over these folks' emotions - all two of them. From the opening black and white flashbacks to the dappled sunlight of the present day camp scenes, this movie was never going to touch upon anything too dark, too ferocious, or too real. Chock this one up as light and fluffy escapism, kind of a summer movie released before we need an excuse to sit in an air conditioned theater and rest our brains.

Benny and Joon has several sugar-coated problems, but fabulous performances by a cast helps it soar above a script too precious to be taken seriously. Aidan Quinn and his mentally ill sister, Mary Stuart Masterson, find their lives disrupted, and enriched, when eccentric Johnny Depp comes on the scene. Consider this a guilty pleasure - it's funny and enjoyable, but too cute for its own good. Rated PG.  1/2

Indecent Proposal stars Demi Moore and Woody Harrelson as a shallow Yuppie couple who allow Robert Redford to buy a night with Moore for $1 million. Manipulative and lacking both sparkle and imagination, the plot unfolds much as you'd expect. Though about as predictable as a commercial, the movie is actually more leaden than you might have anticipated. Rated. R. **

Strictly Ballroom is a quirky Aussie import that is funny and sassy and just a little strange. All hell breaks lose when a talented and spirited young couple decide to introduce new steps in ballroom competition. As stylish as it is intelligent, this low-budget flick is laden with sentiment and originality. Rated PG.  1/2

The Unforgiven is as close to poetry as you are ever likely to encounter in a movie. An unapologetically violent story, this Clint Eastwood drama captures the complexity of the human soul as well as the harsh beauty of the West while it was still wild. C Rated R. ****

Chinese Acrobatic Circus here

The People's Republic of China and Troika International, Inc. will present a limited 15 city tour of the Chinese National Acrobatic Circus (CNAC). This tour will mark the first time the CNAC has played the United States. The tour will play limited engagements including Boston.

The Chinese National Acrobatic Circus is the best Chinese acrobatic troupe in the People's Republic of China with 48 outstanding performers gathered from all over China. The Circus is rooted in Chinese acrobatic artistry which began more than 2,000 years ago but is equally at home in the modern circus arts of our time.

For the past 10 years the troupe has represented the People's Republic of China in over 20 countries, where audiences have been fascinated and entertained by the excellent performances and brilliant artistic skills. Not a single empty seat could be found when the troupe performed in Australia, Canada, Fiji, France, Germany, Japan, Mexico, Norway, the Philippines, and many other countries.

Since its first European Tour in 1989, more than two and a half million Europeans have witnessed the spectacular performances by the Chinese National Acrobatic Circus. The famous European director and artist, Andre Heller, who presented the Circus' recent six month tour in Germany, said: "They are absolutely without equal and set a standard for amazement that cannot be matched."

For the U.S. Tour, the troupe will perform 24 of the most popular acts including: "Bowl Pagoda on the Head," "Balancing on a Board," and "Gangplank," which were awarded as splendid programs in 1976.

The Chinese National Acrobatic Circus with its amazing acrobats, multi-colored costumes and exotic sounds will mesmerize its audience. The tour plays eight performances in Boston at the Wang Center beginning Tuesday, May 18 and running through Sunday, May 23. Ticket prices range from $20 to $37.50 and can be purchased at the Wang Center box office.

S.A.F.E. announces busy summer calendar

Recognizing that families need to plan ahead for summer, the S.A.F.E. program announced a calendar of events which lists activities for children ages 5 to 13 starting June 28th and going straight through to September 3rd!

The program is designed for parents who need summer child care as well as those who are interested in joining in on the fun for selected days only. Care is offered from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. with extended care available 3 to 6 p.m.

Many activities are planned beginning June 28 and running through July.

August will include a trip to Whalom Park, the Franklin Park Zoo and a Harbor Islands Trip! Swimming will be available on several non-trip days on a varied schedule (it may be added to the schedule on a very hot day).

S.A.F.E. stands for Stoneham Aftershool Friendships, Etc. It's a program of the MELD Center, a non-profit agency dedicated to addressing the social, educational and enrichment needs of the individuals and families of Stoneham. S.A.F.E. Summer welcomes participation from families outside Stoneham as well.

The program center is located at 53 Central St., Stoneham, in the rear of the First Unitarian Church. A special registration day will be held there on Saturday, April 24 from 1 to 4 p.m. Parents may call the Director, Cathy Concannon, at (617) 438-8800 to discuss the program or arrange an appointment.

May 13 in Wakefield

Fostering your child's self-esteem

All parents want their children to be healthy and happy. A child's self-esteem plays a major role in that achievement throughout his or her life.

A special lecture, Building Your Child's Self-Esteem, cosponsored by the Wakefield Board of Health and melrose-Wakefield Hospital, will explore how parents and others can help foster positive self-esteem in their children. The lecture will be held on Thursday, May 13 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., in Perkins Lecture Hall, Melrose-Wakefield Hospital, 585 Main Street in Melrose.

The lecture will discuss the importance of parental communication, understanding and empathy in helping a child develop positive self-esteem, communicate in a healthy way, gain independence and learn cooperation.

According to Lynne Reveno, R.N., M.S.N., M.A., one of the lecture's featured speakers, "Parents should also be sure to nurture their self-esteem as well as their child's. It is important to take time for themselves, as individuals as well as a couple, to maintain healthy relationships."

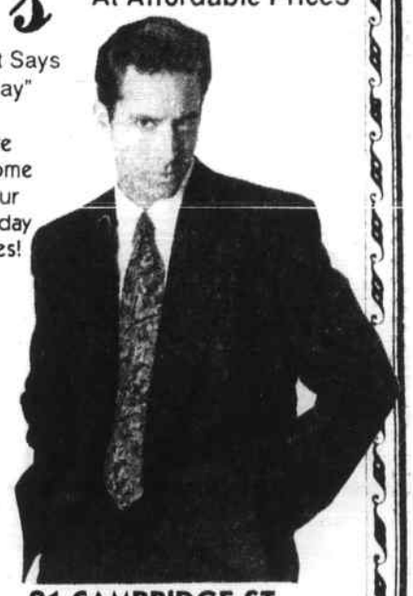

The lecture will provide valuable insight and tips about skills, such as listening, problem solving and negotiating; encouraging a child's autonomy, and giving constructive feedback about both positive and negative behavior.

"Parents can learn that optimism, flexibility and a sense of humor, coupled with the knowledge and skills to promote their child's self-esteem, will contribute to the health and happiness of their child," says Reveno. Reveno and the MWH childbirth educators all have extensive experience in early childhood development and parenting issues.

The lecture will offer a question and answer period and allow for parents to share their parenting experiences. Building Your Child's Self-Esteem is one in a series of ongoing lectures offered by Melrose-Wakefield Hospital for parents.

Registration is required for this lecture. For additional information or to register, please call the Wakefield Board of Health at (617) 246-6375.

We'll Start Framing Your New Home Right Away !

Three Model Homes have been sold in the past two weeks alone!

Modern Continental, a respected leader in the home building industry, is developing prestigious neighborhoods in North Reading (just twenty minutes from Boston). At Ridgeway and Castle Estates, you can team up with our expert engineers and architects to create the home you have been dreaming of. We afford you the opportunity to custom build on a private one to three acre wooded lot in either of our beautiful neighborhoods. Prices start at $260,000 in Castle and the low $300,000's in Ridgeway.

We invite you to visit Ridgeway Estates Thursday through Monday, our office hours are 11 to 4.

John Wayne gives a lesson to Maureen O'Hara in the recent release of "McLintock"

"McLintock" is released

Vintage John Wayne

Three decades after its original theatrical release, one of the most sought after motion pictures in the history of home video has finally arrived "McLintock!" MPI Home Video announces the rush release of this timeless classic.

This classic western film is a brilliantly created effort - a unique collision of hilarity, action/adventure, and a battle of the sexes in a brawling western setting. John Wayne stars as G.W. (George Washington) McLintock, a tough-as-nails cattle baron, banker, and leading citizen of the town of McLintock, a territory which is about to become a side splitting war zone as G.W.'s wife, Katherine, boldly portrayed by Maureen O'Hara, returns after a two year separation from G.W. and the West. Suspecting her husband of infidelities, Katherine is back from the east, seeking a divorce, custody...and revenge. Let the fireworks begin!

Michael Wayne, the film's producer states, "McLintock!" is very special to me because it was the first film I ever produced. Since it has never been released to home video before, we want to make sure that the public gets the absolute best quality version possible. We have taken a lot of time and expense to restore the negative and soundtrack to where it is really better than the original."

Stored in Batjac Productions film vault for decades, this full-length producer's cut has been digitally re-mastered for Hi-Fi Stereo sound and the original negative has been carefully restored, re-edited for the television screen, and color corrected under the supervision of Michael Wayne.

MPI's CEO, Waleed B. Ali said, "We are very excited about this release, primarily because the American public has been waiting decades to take this John Wayne classic home. It is considered one of the top ten requested unreleased films by collectors and retailers alike. I personally feel its provocative because it takes on the age-old battle of the sexes in a comedic manner."

"McLintock!" was originally released to theaters in 1963. A Batjac Production, the classic western was produced by Michael Wayne and directed by Andrew V. McLaglen. The film stars John Wayne and Maureen O'Hara and co-stars Patrick Wayne and Stefanie Powers.

Screening cassettes and photographs are available on request.

Views On Dental Health ®

RICHARD S. LEWIS, D.M.D.

THUMB-SUCKING SYNDROME

Does thumb-sucking lead to crooked teeth? Most experts don't think occasional thumb-sucking in infancy causes any problems with teeth. But there is a general agreement among dentists that prolonged and intensive thumb-sucking past the time the first permanent teeth erupt - at 5 to 6 years of age - can lead to misshapen mouths and displaced teeth.

Actually, the position of individual teeth displaced by thumb-sucking is of less concern to orthodontists than the effect on the bony support of the teeth - and the development of abnormal, deforming muscle activity. If, for example, the habit persists past two years, it could alter the child's swallowing pattern. Once this happens, the youngster may develop a protrusion of the upper front teeth; a narrowness of the upper dental arch; and an obvious malocclusion (improper bite) problem.

As long as there are infants, there will be thumbsuckers. However, if the habit continues longer than usual, it's best to have the child checked by a dentist before it causes any problems..

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health.
